The paper of B.A.R. is thin and its margins are small, but what subscribers want is not so much thick paper and large margins as information. This is why there are about 7000 more records in B.A.R. each year than in any similar publication in the world, in addition to illustrated articles, reviews of catalogues and other matter.

The Libraries and Book Shops of Canterbury

BY HENRY R. PLOMER

WHEN the Abbey of St. Augustine was founded in Canterbury, about the beginning of the seventh century, Pope Gregory sent to Augustine certain books as a mark of his good wishes to the rising Monastery. Leland also affirms that Augustine procured, by means of his friends, large numbers of Greek and Latin works in Italy, and had them sent to him. These works formed the nucleus of the great Library of St. Augustine's Abbey, probably the first of its kind founded in England.

The gifts of Gregory were mainly service books for use in the Abbey church, and Thomas of Elmham, who left an unfinished history of St. Augustine's, gave a list of these volumes, which is translated and printed by Dr. James in his Introduction to, "The Ancient Libraries of Canterbury and Dover," (pp. lxiv-lxxi). This may be briefly abridged as follows: '(1) First, there is in the library the Bible of St. Gregory (Biblia Gregoriana) in two volumes . . . At the beginnings of the books in these volumes are inserted certain leaves, of which some are purple, others of rose colour. These when held up to the light give a wonderful reflection." "(2) There is further, in the same library, the Psalter of St. Augustine, which the said Gregory sent to him . . ." "(3) There is also in the vestry a text of the Gospels . . . and it is called the Text of St. Mildred, because a countryman in Thanet swore falsely upon it, and, it is said, lost his eyes." "(4) There is, besides, another Psalter, placed upon the table of the High Altar, which has outside it an image of Christ and of the four evangelists in plain silver." (5) Also in the library there is another text of the Gospels to which the ten Canons are prefixed . . . (6) Passions of the Apostles. (7) Passions of Saints. (8) Expositions of the Epistles and Gospels from the 3rd Sunday after the Octave of Easter to the 4th Sunday after the Octave of Pentecost. All these were in splendid bindings and lay on the High Altar.

Of these eight books a fragment of the Gregorian Bible is believed to exist among the Royal MSS. at the British Museum, although Dr. James does not commit himself as to its identity. All he says is that "it is of the eighth century, written in a beautiful round minuscule, it does contain some leaves of purple vellum and it did belong to St. Augustine's Abbey."

There is also in the Cottonian MSS. a "Psalter" which may be identical with one of those mentioned in Elmham's list, although Dr. James is inclined to think it a copy. The gifts of Gregory and Augustine to the Abbey were quickly followed by others. Archbishop Theodore introduced into England the study of Greek, and there is no doubt he brought with him many books, and both he and Abbot Adrian are said by Leland to have increased the library. King Athelstan further enriched it, a copy of Isidore de naturis rerum being among his gifts, and on a leaf of this is a list of other works that were presented by him to the Abbey. By the end of the fifteenth century the library of St. Augustine's contained some 1900 books. It was at this time, about 1497, that the catalogue printed by Dr. James was drawn up. In many instances the names of the donors were added, and besides the Abbots and priors include Michael of Northgate, the author of the Ayenbite of Inwit, a famous monument of the Kentish dialect of the fourteenth century; Thomas Sprott, the chronicler of the Abbey, who gave eight books, and a certain Richard Molash, whose book of devotion was in the chapel of the Blessed Mary in the nave of the church. Some thirty years later another literary man, Robert Saltwood, was keeper of this chapel, and will be heard of again.

Of the beginnings of the Christchurch library little is known. King Athelstan gave it a copy of the Gospels of Mac Durnan, and Canute a copy of the Gospels. These were service books, and though there still exist at Oxford, Cambridge and in the great collection of Manuscripts at the British Museum, five Norman books that are believed to have once stood on the Christchurch shelves the bulk of the collection was destroyed in the great fire which broke out in Canterbury in 1067, in which the Cathedral and all the adjacent buildings were swept away. To Archbishop Lanfranc belongs the credit of establishing the mediæval library of Christ Church. He was not only a donor of books but he drew up rules for the distribution of books amongst the monks and for their return at the end of twelve months. Dr. James discovered in the University Library of Cambridge a twelfth century copy of the Music and Arithmetic of Boethius, which contains, on three leaves at the end, a catalogue of books which were clearly in Christ Church library, for a large number of them are found in later catalogues. The list is only a fragment, for some of the most numerous classes of books are unrepresented in it. It contains roughly speaking the books relating to Grammar, Rhetoric, Music, Arithmetic, Poetry, Logic, Astronomy and Geometry. Theology, Medicine and Law are absent save for a volume or two at the end.

The number of volumes in the fragment is 223, and Dr. James believes that the total extent of the library in Beckett's days was between 600 and 700 volumes. The earliest complete catalogue was that compiled by Prior Henry of Eastry (1284-1331), which enumerates 1831 volumes, containing 4157 treatises. Theology and Canon law were the largest classes, but there was a very fair proportion of classical, scientific and historical works. During the fourteenth century the library lost many of its books. This was due to the foundation of Canterbury College at Oxford, to which large numbers of books were transferred from the Christ Church library, never to return. Dr. James, referring to this, says, " There is plenty of evidence . . . that the oldest portions of the library were not spared when the selection for the Oxford students was made ". He adds that not one of the books so transferred has survived either at Oxford or elsewhere.

In the fifteenth century a new library was built by Archbishop Chicheley, over the prior's chapel. That building occupied the same site as the room which now contains the Howley Harrison collection of books, and the library above it therefore filled the same space. Access to the library was obtained by means of a narrow staircase in a gallery outside the passage leading from the lavatory tower to the transept of the church.

The dissolution of the monasteries in the sixteenth century was followed by the total dispersal of the riches of both St. Augustine's and Christ Church libraries. Some of the books from St. Augustine's Abbey were rescued by John Twyne, Schoolmaster and Mayor of the city of Canterbury, and were passed from him to Dr. John Dee, and ultimately found their way to Corpus Christi College, Oxford, by the bequest of Brian Twyne, the godson of John Twyne. Many of the treasures of Christchurch were secured by Archbishop Parker, who gave them to Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. Archbishop Whitgift also carried off some, as amongst the books of his now at Trinity College, Cambridge, are fifty MSS. which are set down in Eastry's catalogue.

One can readily believe that the requirements of these large monastic establishments led to the settlement of booksellers, bookbinders and stationers in the city of Canterbury at a very early date ; but there is no record of them before 1485, when we find the name of John Barker, junior, stationer of Canterbury mentioned on the De Banco Rolls. In the same year a William Ingram, bookbinder and stationer was settled in the ward of Burgate and carried on business there until 1489. In the Treasurers Accounts of the Cathedral for the year 1493-4 there is an entry of a payment of 4s. 8d. to a certain John Sawnder, " pro ligacione duorum librorum missalium," but there is no evidence to shew whether he was a bookbinder by trade or a monk in the Abbey. In 1476 William Caxton the mercer, a native of the Weald of Kent, introduced the art of printing into England, and some sixty years later a printing press was set up in Canterbury by John Mychell, who is first heard of as a bookbinder in Burgate ward in 1533 when he paid a fee of 8d. for permission to carry on his trade in the city, although it is highly probable that he had been in business some years before this, as a John Mychell witnessed the will of a William Chapman of the parish of St. Paul's Canterbury in 1525, and we find Mychell the printer connected with this parish until his death. St. Paul's parish adjoins the monastery of St. Augustine. The exact date at which Mychell added printing to his business as a bookbinder is unknown, but all bibliographers have assigned his work as a printer to a period between 1549 and 1556. A recent discovery at the Public Record Office proves that he was printing at Canterbury in 1541. In a lawsuit brought against him in that year to recover a sum of money due for twenty reams of small papers he is described as " John Michell buke prynter of Canterbury." This is only two years after the dissolution of the greater monasteries, including St. Augustine's Abbey. In 1595 Andrew Maunsell, a London bookseller, published The First Part of a Catalogue of English printed Bookes," and on page 6 records the following title—

" A goodly narration, how S. Augustine (the apostle of England) raysed two dead bodies at Long Compton, collected out of divers authors translated by Joh. Lidgate, monk of Bury. Pri. at S. Austen at Canterburie in 4to." This work apparently bore no date, but Mr. Lewis, in his Life of Caxton, put it as about 1525. Supposing it to have been printed ten years later and we are still anterior to the dissolution of the monastery. Maunsell in his dedication declared that he had only inserted printed books that he had seen, and if we allow, as we must honestly do, that the imprints given by Maunsell are on the whole correct then we have in this entry the record of a book printed in St. Augustine's monastery. Who was the printer ? Who else was it likely to be but John Mychell " the buke prynter at Canterbury "?

There was at this time in the Abbey a monk named Robert Saltwood, who was keeper of the chapel of the Virgin Mary and was a writer of books. One of these was entitled "A Comparyson betweene iiii birdes, the Larke, the Nightyngale, the Thrush and the Cucko, for theyr syngyng who should be chantoure of the quere. By Dan Robert Saltwode monk and imprinted by John Mychyel." This again bore no date, and may have been printed after the dissolution of the monastery, but against this must be set the fact that nothing whatever is known of Saltwood, after the monastery was dissolved, nor does his name appear in the list of pensioners. Assuming the correctness of the imprint recorded by Maunsell, and coupling with it John Mychell's connection with Robert Saltwood, as well as the recent discovery that he was at work as a printer in Canterbury, two years after the dissolution, and there appear to be strong grounds for the assumption that he had a press within the precincts of St. Augustine's Abbey.

There was another stationer in Canterbury at this time, Thomas Kele, who died in 1548. He was a bookseller, and his two sons Richard and John were both at work in London, Richard as a printer at the Long Shoppe in the Poultry and John as a bookseller. Richard Kele's first dated book was a Primer in English issued from the Long Shop in 1542. Whether John Mychell, finding trade bad in Canterbury, accompanied Richard Kele to London, and held some position in the Long Shop is not clear ; but fragments of two books, " The Life of St. Margaret " and " The Life of St. Gregory's Mother," were printed by Mychell at the Long Shop in the Poultry. But he was evidently back in Canterbury in 1547, as in June of that year he witnessed the will of another William Chapman of St. Paul's parish, and his press was actively at work there between 1549 and 1556 the date of his death.

He left no will, but in the Act Book for the year 1557 is a list of the creditors to the goods of John Michell of the parish of St. Paul, Canterbury, dated the 20th Jany. 1556 [i. e. 1556-7]. There is no reference to his trade, but amongst the creditors was Nicholas Clifton, a bookseller in Oxford.

The next stationer of importance who is met with in Canterbury was Clement Bassock. He was in all probability a bookseller, and took an active part in municipal affairs. In the last year of the reign of Philip and Mary (1557-8) he is mentioned in the Burghmote books as common councilman. In the 5th year of Elizabeth he was elected mayor of the city and was afterwards elected Alderman of Ridingate ward. The only clue to his address is the Subsidy Roll of the 13th Elizabeth in which he is described as a stationer living in the ward of Burgate and his goods were assessed at £14. On May 11th, 1576 he became bondsman for James Yonge of Cranbrooke, (J. M. Cowper, Canterbury Marriage Licences, 1st Series). He died in 1583, his will being proved on 30th March. It makes no mention of his business nor does the Inventory of his goods give the titles of the books in his shop.

In 1594 we meet with the name of Esdras Johnson, who in that year took up his freedom as a stationer of Canterbury, and is also described as a schoolmaster.

At the opening of the seventeenth century we meet with the name of Joseph Buckley or Bulkley, who had served his apprenticeship with Clement Bassock. In the Treasurers Accounts of the Cathedral for the year 1603 Buckley was paid a sum of 17s. " pro excambio bibliae, pro precacionis libris, et pro connexione librorum canticorum."

In the British Museum is a copy of a sermon preached in the Cathedral, by the Rev. Thomas Jackson, which bears on its title page the imprint, " London, Printed by John Haviland for Joseph Bulkley and are to be sold at his shop in Canterbury 1622." Joseph Bulkley had two sons, one of whom, Stephen Bulkley, was afterwards the famous Royalist printer at York, Gateshead and Newcastle.

Another bookseller in Canterbury at this time is revealed to us from a record in the Privy Council Register of 1638 :—" Whereas an humble peticion was this " day presented to the Board by Nicholas Johnson, of the Citty of Canterbury, " stationer, humbly desiring for the reasons therein conteyned, that he might by " the favor of the Board be exempted from that parte of the Decree in Starr " Chamber, that noe person not haveing bin seaven yeares apprentiz to the " trade, shall in any citty or markett towne buy or sell books, upon forfeiture of " the same or otherwise that he might have liberty to sell off all such books as he " now hath lyeing upon his handes, before he be suppressed. Their Lordshippes " upon consideration had thereof, did think fitt and order, that Joseph Buckley, " likewise stationer of the said Citty, should forthwith buy off all the Petitioners " books, at reasonable and indifferent prices as they can agree, or otherwise in " case of the said Buckley's refusall, that a true Inventory be made and taken of " them by some person to be appointed by the Mayor of the said citty on that " behalfe, and that the Petitioner bee permitted to continue this trade vntill he " have sold off the same, provided he enter into bond, not to make sale of any " books other than those contayned in the said Inventory, Dated February 14th, " 1637 (i. e. 1637-8)."

In 1651 Rest Fenner took up his freedom by redemption as a bookbinder, and is mentioned as a vendor of patent medicines in an advertisement in The Intelligencer and Newes in 1663. He was probably the Rest Fenner "senr. " whose will was proved at Canterbury on the 29th December 1711. He left two sons, Rest and Enoch, who succeeded to the business.

In the early years of the eighteenth century the art of printing was revived in Canterbury after a silence of 160 years by a bookseller named James Abree, who settled in Canterbury in 1717 and founded the first Canterbury newspaper, " The Kentish Post and Canterbury News Letter." He set up his printing office and bookseller's shop in one of the narrow ways that led to the Castle," over against the Three Tuns in St. Margarets parish." The Three Tuns has long since disappeared and its exact site cannot be determined, but it was probably in Castle Street, near Beer Cart Lane.

At first a quarto of ten pages, the paper speedily took the form of a small folio sheet and was issued twice a week on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and bore James Abree's imprint. At one period of its existence " The Kentish Post " had a large woodcut view of the city of Canterbury on the front page. About four inches of space at the bottom of the last column was reserved for Kentish news, which consisted principally of the names of malefactors tried at the assizes or executed on Pennenden Heath, an occasional account of a highway robbery on the Kentish roads, the movements of troops forming the garrison, and the annual election of the mayor and aldermen. All the rest of the paper was filled with foreign or domestic news, taken from the London papers of that date ; but sandwiched in between this were a great many Kentish advertisements, from which no doubt the chief revenue of the paper was derived. As a bookseller and stationer James Abree had an extensive business. He sold stationery ware of all kinds and dealt in wall papers and patent medicines. His stock of books was large and varied and he was agent for several London firms who issued books in weekly and monthly parts. He advertised these in his newspapers and distributed them by his newsmen, who also carried with them a store of ballads and chap-books for lighter reading. About 1764 Abree took into partnership George Kirkby, the son of a Canterbury parson, to whom he transferred the business on his retirement in 1768. Abree died in August of that year and shortly afterwards George Kirkby became partner with James Simmons, who had founded a rival newspaper in Canterbury called the " Kentish Gazette," and thereupon the " Kentish Post " came to an end.

James Simmons was the son of a barber and was born in 1740 in an obscure part of the city. He was educated at the King's School, and subsequently apprenticed to Thomas Greenhill, stationer, of London. In addition to founding the Kentish Gazette Simmons was appointed distributor of stamps for the County of Kent, and in company with Kirkby established about 1780 a circulating library at the Kings Arms Printing Office, with a reading and newspaper room, the terms of subscription being :—To the Library-Reading Room and Newspapers by the year £1 11s. 6d. Half year 17s. Quarter 9s.—six weeks five shillings. To the Reading Room and Newspapers only by the year £1 1s. Half year 11s. Quarter 6s. To the Library only by the year £1 1s. Half year 11s. Quarter 6s. [Advt. in the Kentish Gazette].

James Simmons served the respective offices of Alderman, Mayor and Member of Parliament for Canterbury, and undertook several city improvements, most notable of all being the laying out of the Dane John Gardens. He died at Westminster on Thursday January 22nd 1807 in his 66th year. Amongst notable books printed and published by the firm of Simmons & Kirkby was the first edition of Hasted's History of Kent, 1778 and the same authors History of Canterbury, 1799.

Space forbids more than a passing glance at some of the other booksellers in Canterbury during the eighteenth century. Enoch Fenner died 1729, leaving his business to his son Rest Fenner the third, whose advertisement in the Kentish Post ran as follows :— " Rest Fenner Book-binder from London (the son of Mr. Enoch Fenner, bookseller of Canterbury, deceased), continues the trade in the same shop, now the sign of The Bible and Crown, behind St. Andrews church Canterbury, and sells all sorts of Bibles, Common Prayer Books, Books of Devotion, School-Books and all other sorts of Books, viz, Law, Physick, Divinity, Mathematicks, Geometry, Astronomy, History, Voyages and Travels, Poetry, Plays, Paper Books of all sorts, Painted papers for hanging of rooms all sorts of fine-maps and prints ; Fine writing paper, [etc. etc.] N. B. All sorts of Books neatly bound in any manner of binding : Gentlemen's studies gilt and lettered either at Home or at their own Houses at a reasonable rate."

Another firm of repute was that of William and John Flacton. They were the sons of John Flacton, bricklayer, and took up their freedom by "birth," that is as the sons or a freeman, William in 1730 and John in 1738. Their place of business was in the parish of St. Alphege. Seymour's Survey of Kent, printed in 1776, was published by them. They were also publishers of music, William Flacton being an amateur musician and composer of considerable ability. At one time he was organist of Faversham and in 1742 wrote a musical setting to Somervile's The Chace. The firm also held book auctions from time to time. Before the close of the century the firm consisted of the Flactons, James Claris and John Marrable. The date of John Flacton's death is unknown but William died in January 1798, aged 88, and was buried in St. Dunstan's churchyard on January 12th.

About this time, too, William Bristow opened a shop on the Parade, and became the publisher of the 8th edition of Hasted's History of Kent in 1797.

In 1812 John Marrable, bookseller and wine merchant, an interesting survival of the old alliance between wine and books, who had dissolved partnership with John Claris in 1804, was succeeded by his son-in-law, William Flood, who set up as a printer in Mercery Lane and announced his intention of issuing a Sunday morning paper, but whether he ever did so is unknown. Meanwhile after the death of James Simmons the firm of Simmons & Kirkby became Rouse, Laurence & Kirkby and continued to flourish for many years. Another notable bookseller settled on the Parade was Mawer Cowtan, who was established about 1812, was associated with Robert Colegate, a printer and publisher in the publication of the Rules, Orders and Regulations of St. Augustine's Gaol in 1812. Cowtan afterwards became Alderman of the City, and his son, Robert Cowtan, wrote Memories of the British Museum in 1872.

About 1825 Henry Ward opened a bookseller's shop near the Cathedral Gates, afterwards moving to Sun Street and subsequently to Mercery Lane. He was an enterprising man and published many pamphlets of local interest, and dealt in prints as well as books. He was succeeded by his son-in-law, Masters, from whom the business passed to—Asshenden and then to Hal Drury, who published among other things the Rev. M. E. Walcott's Memorials of Canterbury in 1868. Edward Crow, his former assistant, next purchased the business, which is now in the hands of his son.

Robert Colegate established a reading room and circulating library in 1833, printed a Kentish dialect poem called, " Dick & Sal, or Jack and Joan's Fair "

Messrs. Austens business was established about 1850 by Robert Austen, an uncle of the present proprietor. His first shop was in Burgate Street, but not finding this a sufficiently busy thoroughfare the business was removed to St. George's Street, where it has ever since remained.

The history of the firm of H. J. Goulden Limited, of 39 & 40 High Street, begins with Charles Goulden, who in 1839 had a bookseller's shop in Guildhall Street. About 1847 the business was removed to 41 High Street, and in 1864 the management of it passed to W. E. Goulden, eldest son of Charles. William E. Goulden was succeeded in 1870 by his brother, H. J. Goulden, who had been connected with the business since 1863. Three years later the firm moved to its present premises. In 1910 H. G. Goulden, the third son of H. J. Goulden, became a partner and in 1915 the business was made into a private company, with H. J. Goulden as Managing Director. Mr. H. J. Goulden is also senior partner in the firm of Goulden & Curry, of High Street, Tunbridge Wells, a very noted and old-established business, and also in the firm of Goulden & Wind, booksellers, of 35 Bank St., Ashford.

At the present moment it is interesting to add that Mr. H. J. Goulden has five sons and three sons-in-law serving in the Army. William E. Goulden, after a somewhat roving career, started as a second-hand bookseller in Station Road, Canterbury, about 1882, and removed about 1900 to Church Street, where he died in 1911. He was a great collector of all that related to Kent. A large part of his collection is now in the Public Library at Woolwich ; Mr. Barnard, of Tunbridge Wells, also bought some of it, but unfortunately none of it was secured by the City or Canterbury.

In 1802 the first printed catalogue of the Cathedral Library was issued, there being at that time 3,656 volumes on the shelves. During the next forty years the library grew so rapidly that a new building became necessary and was built on the site of the monastic dormitory, from the plans of H. G. Austin, the cathedral architect. The books were removed from the old to the new library in 1868, and the old library was refitted in 1887 to receive the Howley Harrison collection, which had been bequeathed by Archbishop Howley in 1848 to the Venerable Benjamin Harrison, Archdeacon of Maidstone and Canon of Canterbury from 1845 to 1887. This collection of books contains 11,711 volumes and is especially rich in early-printed Bibles, liturgical books, and controversial tracts and pamphlets. In 1911 the number of printed books in the chapter library was 13,600. The library is open to readers each Tuesday and Friday (with occasional exceptions) from 11.15 a.m. to 1-15 p. m., when the assistant librarian is in attendance. Books may be borrowed by beneficed and licensed clergy or the dioceses, and by other persons who possess the written permission of the librarian or deputy librarian. The Howley Harrison library is not open to the public, but on days when the chapter library is open the catalogue of the former is placed on the tables and readers may borrow books by written consent of the dean or of a canon or of the deputy librarian (1). No account of the Chapter Library would be complete without a brief record of the priceless MSS. be-

Rolls relating to the domestic economy of the Priory about 2,500 in number, the earliest being an almoners roll of 1269. The Monastic Registers in 21 volumes and Treasurers Account books from 1541-1800; These MSS. were very fully described by Dr. John Brigstock Sheppard in the Reports to the Historical MSS. Commission, but at the time of making that report many of the archives of the City of Canterbury were in the care of the Dean and Chapter and were included in these reports; but these documents have now been removed to the Beaney Institute.

In 1825 The Philosophical and Literary Institution was founded in Canterbury, and a special building for housing the Museum connected with it was erected in Guildhall Street. At the same time a library was included as part of the scheme and amongst the original donors of books were Alderman Richard Frend and the Right Hon. S. R. Lushington. This library quickly grew and in 1832 the first Catalogue was published. It filled 34 octavo pages and contained some 1700 volumes, and amongst works of local interest may be noticed Hasted's History of Kent, in 12 vols., Somner's Antiquities of Canterbury, 1640 Duncombe's History of Antiquities of Herne and Reculver, Gostling's Walk in and about Canterbury, two editions and Woolworth's Canterbury Cathedral, 1816, several Poll Books and a few issues of the Kentish Post and Canterbury Journal from 1770 to 1773 and the Kentish Gazette for the years 1793-5. The first librarian was John Pount

The library consisted of two rooms thrown into one on the left of the entrance, but they were small and inconvenient, and it was a good day for the City of Canterbury when Dr. G. Beaney, a native of the city who had amassed a fortune in Australia, bequeathed to it a sum of £10,000 to found a workmen's Institute. Some dispute arose about the terms of the will, but eventually, owing to the exertions of Mr. Alderman Hart and Mr. Alderman Mason, the bequest was declared valid. The Council afterwards added £5,000 to the original sum, a site was cleared on the northern side of the High Street by the removal of the old George and Dragon Inn, and the present building erected at a cost of £16,000. The free library of the Beaney Institute was furnished at the cost of Mr. Joshua Cox, a native of the city, who presented 1000 guineas for the purpose, the books from the old library in Guildhall Street being transferred to it during the year 1899 and the formal opening taking place on Jan. 1st 1900. The Committee secured the services of Mr. H. T. Mead as librarian, whose previous experience in the working of the Free Libraries Act, at the Tate Public Library at Streatham, proved of great assistance in the arrangement and working of the new library. Their choice has ever since been amply justified. Courteous and helpful at all times Mr. Mead has thrown himself whole-heartedly into his work at Canterbury. For many years, in addition to his duties as librarian, he has held the position of Deputy Curator of the Museum, and in this capacity has had the arrangement and classification of the exhibits not only in the Beaney Institute but at the Westgate Towers. As librarian he has paid much attention to the acquisition of books on Kentish history and topography, and in this he has been largely helped by the generous gift of Alderman Sir George Collard, who gave a sum of £210 for this special purpose. Mrs. Scott Robertson has also given about 200 books relating to Kent, so that the Beaney Institute has now a large and valuable collection of works relating to Kent and Canterbury.

In 1902 the Library of the East Kent Natural History Society, numbering some 1,300 volumes, was given a home in the Reference Library of the Institute, which is also well found in modern books of reference, including the Dictionary of National Biography, The Century Dictionary and Matthew's Year Books of Probates in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. In the strong room of the Institute are preserved many MSS. of civic interest, notably the Burghmote Minute Books, from the fourteenth century; The Chamberlains Account Books, dating back to the reign of Richard II.: The Minutes and Letter books of the Canterbury and Whitstable Railway; the minutes of the Canterbury Volunteers, 1794; the minutes of the Canterbury Catch Club, while recently a valuable addition has been made to these MSS. by the transfer from the Town Clerk's Office of the Register of Pleas in the Court of Record held in the Guildhall, Canterbury, between 1674 and 1687.

COLLOQUIALISMS

Mention of one book shop at Canterbury was omitted from the preceding article, viz., that of Mr. Philpot, 53 Burgate Street. The business was opened in 1907 and the stock includes local, theological and general items, and old prints of Canterbury, while some business is done in ex-libris and stamps, particularly stamps of Great Britain: There is a lending department of popular novels with about 1,400 titles.

Lot 1052 at Sotheby's on Nov. 15th. contained Quaritch's catalogues, Nos. 1-89, in 2 vols., 1847-54. All the catalogues were issued from 16 Castle Street, Leicester Square, where the great business was started in a very humble way. It was a small shop, with a bow window, in much the same style as one sees in a country village. The premises were demolished many years ago, but a new building, of the same size, has been erected on the site, and the old bow window has been reproduced, and can be seen at the corner of St. Martin's Court. Bearing in mind the fame of the great business built up by Quaritch I examined the catalogues with interest. The first was a folio broadside, the catalogue filling both of its pages with books ranging in value from one shilling to £2 10s., but the majority were priced under five shillings. Its title was Quaritch's Cheap Book Circular, October, 1847. Below this was a line Selling for Cash at very Reduced Prices, underlined in red ink and followed by a note, also in red ink, in Quaritch's own hand, with a considerable discount to the trade. The descriptions were bald to a degree, and gave no sign of the perfection of cataloguing which has distinguished later issues. When, in 1849, No. 10 was reached the catalogues had developed into the octavo page which we have known for upwards of sixty years, and the steady growth of the business is clearly indicated by the importance and the prices of the books offered for sale. I remember the old premises quite well, and have attended some of the trade sales held there by Quaritch. The house stood in a kind of bay, the next-door premises being at right angles, and it was next door but one that Mr. Robson started the business which has developed into the well-known one in Coventry Street. Opposite this page is a plate of Quaritch's premises, taken shortly before they were pulled down to make way for Charing Cross Road.

The Norwich Public Library was founded in 1608, and has the distinction of being one of the earliest provincial public libraries, if not the first, established in England. Norwich was also the first municipality to adopt the first Public Library Act in 1850. Librarians will therefore be glad to know that Mr. George A. Stephen, the present City Librarian, is writing a monograph entitled Three Centuries of a City Library, a Historical and Descriptive Account of the Norwich Public Library, to be published by the Norwich Public Library Committee early this year. It will consist of 80 pages, and will contain 6 illustrations, price 3s., and as only 250 copies will be printed those who wish to secure a copy should lose no time in applying for it. The contents of the library will be described, including a list of 28 incunabula by Mr. A. W. Pollard, and a list of manuscripts, etc. There will also be a list of the librarians and an account of their duties. Applications should be made to The City Librarian, Public Library, Norwich.

Bibliographical compilations should be run on system. Otherwise you are all at sea. An illustration of this appears in the present Part. A copy of The Great Assizes Holden in Parnassus by Apollo and his Assessours, 1645, is recorded. In the auction catalogue it appeared under the heading of " Parnassus." This, doubtless, because the work appears in Lowndes under that heading. But, all headings are arbitrary, depending upon the opinion of the cataloguer, which opinion may, or may not be, right. The opinion of Lowndes was that it should be entered under " Parnassus." But any other bibliographer might argue that " Great," or " Assizes," or " Apollo " would be just as apposite a heading as " Parnassus." The right method is that which, I believe, is adopted by the London Library in compiling its catalogue, viz., that if no author's name is known the book should be entered under the first word (omitting " A ", " An " and " The ") in which case ' The Great Assizes ' would be entered under the word " Great." It is under that word that the copy will be found in this Part, and a cross-reference under "Parnassus" will be found in the Index when Part 4 appears.

See the record of Mr. Kipling's The Five Nations in this Part (page 83). The verse seems prophetic of the present position of our country, and is of high interest as proof of the author's insight.

Here is a delightful letter which reached me from an American subscriber on November 7th :—

" Will you very kindly contribute for me the enclosed draft for £20 to whatever War or Relief Fund you may think advisable ?. I have long had it in mind to do this, and only wish it might be a much larger sum."

The pleasure it gave me to receive such a letter was mixed with a sense of the responsibility which it threw on me. But in that same day's issue of The Times was an Appeal from the Lord Mayor of London, supported by a letter signed by the Archbishop of Canterbury and other religious leaders of the nation, asking for funds for the purpose of feeding the children of Belgium, who, through underfeeding, consequent upon the occupation of the country, are fast falling victims to tuberculosis. I could not imagine a more praiseworthy object of my kind-hearted subscriber's generosity, so made my decision therewith, and it met with his complete approval.

On August 14th, 1916, the death occurred of Miss Barham, daughter of the author of The Ingoldsby Legends, aged 86. A few days later I learnt that Miss Barham had been possessed of innumerable letters written to her father by Dickens, Thackeray and other literary giants of his time, and that twenty years ago she had burnt the whole of them, saying that private correspondence ought not to get into the hands of the public. What a tragedy ! We all know that really private correspondence ought not to be made public, but evidently the poor lady could not discriminate between such and letters which probably contained invaluable contributions to the literary history of the day.

—— Oxford University Press, Amen Corner, E. C. General Catalogue, November, 1916; 574 pages (including a list of contents, pp. V-VIII., and a comprehensive alphabetical index of all authors and editors and most titles, which runs to 86 pages and makes reference to the subject catalogue very easy). Among the points of interest of the catalogue are the following:—it not only gives many bibliographical details—including size in inches, number of pages, and date of publication (except of some school books and other books that are constantly being reprinted)—but sets out the full contents of books in several volumes, collective works or volumes of poems or essays by different authors (e. g. the works of Lucian, p. 156 Oxford Survey, p. 51, Minor Caroline Poets, p. 160, Elizabethan Essays, p. 170); it has a number of illustrations scattered throughout the different sections: it describes, as well as all Clarendon Press books, all the books published by the Press for learned societies other than the University of Oxford, all Oxford Poets, Oxford Standard Authors, World's Classics, etc., most of the Medical, Elementary Educational and Juvenile Books published jointly by Henry Frowde and Hodder and Stoughton, and, in the last section (pp. 433-480), a few of the Oxford Bibles, Prayer Books, Hymn Books and Devotional Books. It may be added that the volume is strongly bound in grey boards, with linen back, a virtue to be appreciated when one learns that this issue will, in the present national circumstances, be for a long time current, and, being a bound volume, it will not run the usual fate of catalogues, viz. that of getting dogs'eared, made imperfect, and finally being lost or used by some careless employée to light a fire. One learns from the covers that the Press not only has Publishing Departments in Oxford and London but also in Edinburgh, Glasgow, New York, Toronto, Melbourne, Bombay, Madras, Cape Town and Shangai and that it has gained the Grand Prix twenty three times at International Exhibitions between 1889 and 1911.

AUTHOR OF 'THE HISTORY OF BRADFORD'
FROM AN OIL PAINTING ATTRIBUTED TO J. HUNTER THOMPSON

The Literary Institutions of Bradford with Notes on the Early Printers Booksellers and Newspaper Press

BY MILES E. HARTLEY

Deputy Chief Librarian Bradford Public Libraries

OF comparatively recent growth as a town of importance, Bradford lays no claim to distant historical association. In feudal and mediæval annals the pages of its history are scant, the earliest recorded mention of the place occurring in Domesday, where it is spelled Bradeford. The origin of the place-name, however, cannot be given with certainty, the most common assumption being that connecting the locality with a broad ford. At the Norman sequestration Bradford came within the lands given to Ilbert de Lacy, the record in Domesday (A. D. 1086) being very brief—"Ilbert has it, and it is waste."

On the world-wide fame of the city as the centre of the worsted trade we need not dilate, except to record the fact of its growth, expansion, and pace-keeping with the country's commercial development during the nineteenth century. The instinct for commerce and business must have been at all times a characteristic feature of the man of Bradford. Leland, the antiquary, who visited the town in the time of Henry VIII., writes of it as a "praty quik market towne," and of Leeds "as large as Bradeford, but not so quik as it"—the latter place evidently more than holding its own so far back as the days of the Tudors. In 1286 a charter was granted to Edmund de Lacy to hold a market "every week on Thursday," the day of the week which has been "Market Day" ever since.

The rapid growth of the city, both numerically and in area, has been equalled by few towns in the country, its extraordinary development during the later part of the last century being almost as striking as the "mushroom"—like expansion of the modern American city of the Western States. An estimate of the population in 1821 puts the figure at 13,000; in 1841 it totalled 73,210 persons; in 1861, 114,383; in 1891, 266,164; whilst a calculation taken at the end of 1913 showed an increase to 290,500. By the addition, at various periods, of adjoining townships and districts the city area has been enlarged from 6,508 acres in 1847 to its present magnitude of 22,843 acres. Incorporation was obtained in 1847, the present Council consisting of the Lord Mayor, 21 Aldermen, and 63 Councillors; whilst in Parliamentary representation the three divisions of Central, East and West Bradford each send one member to the House of Commons. The rank of city was accorded in 1897.

To a long list of literary associations, such as may be connected with many a less important town, Bradford has no pretension, its progressive interests and concerns lying mainly in the direction of matters social and commercial. Defoe, in his Tour Through Great Britain observes:—"The first town we came to from Halifax was Bradford; it is a market town, but is of no other note than having given birth to Dr. Sharpe, the good Archbishop of York." Other historical writers have given the town scant attention and even John James, the author of the History of Bradford, somewhat bitterly writes: "The people of Bradford are not remarkable for their encouragement of literary effort; especially as the emanation of a townsman. Political speeches afford the easiest access to local fame. Literary merit is unrecognised in the competition. It must look abroad for encouragement." Yet despite this, and other derogatory attacks, Bradford has never been lacking in efforts of an institutional character.

The Bradford Library and Literary Institution, founded in 1774, was amongst the first of its kind. Established at a time when the town was first bestirring itself and feeling its importance as a centre of the worsted industry, its 4,000 inhabitants must have had a fair sprinkling of educated men and women to whom such an institution was an absolute intellectual necessity. In the light of the present day the early reports and balance sheets of the Library reveal some interesting facts. The Society was established with a company of 72 subscribers, who each paid an entrance fee of one guinea and an Annual Subscription of five shillings. The first disbursements that the Treasurer was called upon to make are worth quoting. Extracted from the books of the period they read :—

1775.	To John Aked for a bookcase and desk	3	13	1

The first year's working resulted in the " Receipts " showing up at £24 14s. 11d. as against " Payments " of £31 2s. 0½d. It is quite obvious that there was no waste upon " Staff Expenses," the first Librarian carrying out his duties for the modest remuneration of £5 per annum, a figure which a few years later was advanced to £8. The titles of the first lot of books purchased, with their prices, should now be read with interest.

Blackstone's Commentaries (4 vols.) £1 10s. ; Hume's History of England (8 vols.) £2 5s. ; Pope's Shakespeare (16 vols.) £1 4s. ; Sterne's Works (complete, 4 vols.) 15s. ; Priestley's Examination of Dr. Reid, 4s ; Boccaria on Crimes and Punishments 6s. ; Gregory's Comparative View, 2s. 6d. ; Dodsley's Poems (6 vols.) 15s. ; Boswell's Corsica, 2s. ; Robertson's History of Scotland, (2 vols.) 9s. ; Hook's Roman History (6 vols.) £1 10s. ; Swift's Works, (17 vols.) £2 2s. ;

In many cases the Treasurer's books reveal an odd mixture of literary acquisitions and domestic necessities and one comes across a sequence of entries reading :

Amongst the titles of books purchased in the earliest days of its foundation the records of the institution show the following sequence of curious titles :—
Alexander's History of Women ; A Treatise on Chimneys ; Memoirs of the Year 2500 ; Choleric Men ; Sermons to Young Women ; Men of Feeling ; Rivals and Runaways ; Love and Madness ; Triumphs of Temper ; The Capricious Lady ; The Mysterious Husband ; Strictures on Female Education ; On Hard Drinking ; Essays by a Gentleman who has left his Lodgings ; Says I to Myself ; Confessions of an Old Bachelor ; Confessions of an Old Maid ; The Adventures of Sir Frizzle Pumpkin ; Recollections of an Old Gentleman who had had Six Wives.

In an interesting account of this old institution Mr. William Scruton quotes the following quaint entries in the cash and minute books, showing that the economic and other interests of the Library were jealously guarded by those who were responsible for its welfare and management :—

1777, February—To Mary Wood for attending the library till a new librarian be appointed.	0	5	0

1814, —Paid Philosophical Society for a large table, etc., covered with cloth.	8	8	0

In its earliest days the Library was housed in quite humble quarters and it was not until the early " fifties " that the Committee became sufficiently ambitious to venture on a rental exceeding £20 per annum. From Chapel Court a removal was made about the year 1829 to the " Publick Room " in Kirkgate, and there the Library remained until 1854, when the premises of the Bradford Dispensary, in Darley Street, were bought, the upper portion only being utilised. By this arrangement the ground floor was sub-let at substantial rentals as shop premises. By the year 1898 all the encumbrances on the property were paid off, and the shareholders became possessed of a valuable estate in the heart of the city. In recent years considerable enlargement has been made by the addition of another storey to the building and there is every evidence that the institution, with its 33,000 volumes, catering only for a " select " and limited clientèle, serves a useful purpose in the educational and literary life of " Worstedopolis."

The Mechanics' Institute Library. Any record of the earliest attempt to found a Mechanics' Institute in Bradford must be associated with the name of Joseph Farrar, Mayor of Bradford for the period 1863-64. Born in Halifax in 1805, Mr. Farrar settled in Bradford some twenty years later. The year after his arrival in the town (1826) an attempt was made by him and others to establish a library on Mechanics' Institute lines, and although a small collection of books was gathered together fhe effort proved tutile and the books became dispersed. The temperament of Farrar, however, was not such as to allow him to remain indifferent and inactive, and as he gained further local influence his efforts were renewed, with the result that in March 1832 a town's meeting was held. Among others present at that gathering were Edward Baines and Thomas Plint, the pioneers of the Mechanics' Institute movement in Yorkshire. As a consequence of this meeting a room was secured at the modest rental of £13 per annum and was furnished as a classroom with desks and forms. A large cupboard served for housing the volumes which formed the nucleus of the library, and it was arranged that the room should be available on three evenings per week, the remaining nights being given up to Class teaching in elementary subjects. The common difficulty of that period, the raising of funds for educational and literary uses, was eventually overcome, and from the donations received from generous patrons about £200 was spent upon books, whilst the sum of six guineas had to suffice to remunerate the chief and sole Librarian and his two coadjutors, the class teachers jointly. By the end of the first year (1833) the library volumes increased to 800 and a printed catalogue was produced, in the pages of which, it should be noted, not a single work of fiction is recorded, a condition of things which would stagger the modern patrons of the Institution. In the year 1837 the Union of West Riding Institutes came into existence, Bradford being one of the thirteen institutes constituting the federation.

The Annual Report of that Union for the following year (1838) throws a striking light upon the reading facilities then existing in the most populous part of the county. Of the thirteen Institutes only nine possessed libraries, from which the aggregate total of volumes available was 8,373. Of these Bradford accounted for 2,400 works, the next on the list being York with 1,400, Leeds 1,270, and Huddersfield with 1,200 volumes. By the year 1840 the earnest workers for the Institute saw their great ideal realised in the shape of a building specially erected for their uses. The following year the facilities were extended by the place being available during the day from one o'clock, whilst in 1852 the step of introducing daily and weekly journals into the reading-room was taken, but, as a local writer remarked, " not without serious misgivings." It was not, however, until the year 1872 that the directors " most reluctantly yielded to the growing demand for light reading." This was met by adding such " safe " novelists as Dickens, Thackeray, Lytton, Kingsley, Cooper, Trollope, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Gaskell, Miss Yonge, and Charlotte and Anne Brontë, " but " says one, recorder, " the line was drawn at Emily Brontë whose ' Wuthering Heights ' was considered to be a very wicked book "—a strange commentary upon the work of one whose birthplace, Thornton village, was within a few miles' distance of the Institute building, the district later becoming a part of Bradford city itself.

Many times since that day of condemnation has the work of Emily and her sisters received its due recognition within the walls of the Institute, and with a literary judgment less biassed and broader based. Even so recently as the 30th of March last Mrs. Humphry Ward, addressing the members of the Brontë Society, assembled in the Mechanics' Institute, spoke in a comparative way of the claims of Charlotte and Emily Brontë, giving the fuller praise to the latter as being possessed of the greater power of transmuting detail in a supreme degree. It may be added that the Brontë Society owes its foundation and establishment to the enthusiasm of a few Bradford worshippers at the shrine of the famous trio of writers. Beyond this point in the history of the Institute it is not necessary to travel in a paper of this nature and magnitude, and recording the fact that the present contents of the Library totals about 30,000 volumes we close our record of its work.

Bradford Philosophical Society. So far back as 1808 an attempt was made to found a Philosophical Society in the town. Very little is known of this early effort beyond the fact that there exists to-day a printed copy of the Rules and Regulations of the Society which were approved at a meeting of " gentlemen of this town and neighbourhood, held on November 2nd., 1808, for the purpose of considering upon the eligibility of forming an Association which shall have for its Objects the acquirement of Science and the improvement in Arts and Manufactures. Mr. Hailstone, F. L. S., in the chair." A second attempt to form such a Society was made some fifteen years later (1823) the above-named worthy citizen being again to the fore in the movement. But even this effort, although finding a large body of support, was doomed to failure, mainly, it is said, through the opposition of the Vicar of Bradford of that time—the Revd. Henry Heap.Writing upon this phase of Bradford's intellectual life Willam Scruton states :—" The Revd. Henry Heap was an amiable gentleman, and had many sterling qualities. As a clergyman he was most energetic in all the duties of his parish, and was given to charitable deeds. But his views as to the wisdom of spreading enlightenment broadcast were narrow and out of date ; moreover, he regarded it as impolitic, and even dangerous, to educate the humbler classes beyond their station in life, He therefore felt it to be his duty to discourage the formation of a philosophical society, and on his preaching a sermon, in which he enlarged " on the irreligious tendency of a philosophising spirit," several of the subscribers took fright and withdrew their subscriptions ; and thus a society so auspiciously formed was broken up and abandoned. This, of course, gave rise to no little bitterness of feeling among many of Mr. Heap's parishioners. The vicar came in for a considerable share of blame and censure for taking so foolish a step, but what shall be said for those who, on so trivial a pretext, could withdraw both their countenance and their promised subscription."

The year 1839 saw the establishment of a similar society, one of its leading promoters, oddly enough, being the Revd. William Scoresby, Mr. Heap's successor in the vicariate. The first Annual Report of this new Association was of a hopeful tone but unfortunately the society had a short career and ended its usefulness in 1844. Some twenty years elasped before an attempt was made to establish a successor to the defunct society. At a meeting held on December 23rd., 1864, most of the notable men of the town and neighbourhood attended and supported this revival. Dr. Burnet (the Vicar) stated that if any of them knew of the flourishing condition of the Leeds Philosophical Society " it would make them blush for Bradford, and wish that a similar one existed here." Alluding to the two previous attempts to establish a society in Bradford, he said the first began at the wrong end in seeking to commence with a formidable building. The second appeared to have been little else than a literary club, and, in a town like this, a literary exclusive club would carry with it the seeds of its own dissolution. Any society instituted in this town, to exist, must be very extensive, very elastic, of a general and public character, and it must hold out the right hand of sympathy to other literary institutions, however humble they might be.

The new society was launched and fair sailing experienced for a period of years, but about the late seventies so inactive had the body become that an effort was made to link up its functions with kindred associations in the town. This led to a resuscitation in 1884 and, after clearing off a long-standing debt, a fresh start was made and the Society passed through well-nigh three decades to a sound and useful purpose. Latterly, however, it has again passed into a moribund state, and beyond spasmodic efforts to organise special lectures, notably such as that delivered by Nansen and Sir Ernest Shackleton, the Society may be considered to have ended its career.

Bradford Public Libraries. By a series of letters on "Free Libraries, their Nature and Operations" addressed to Mr. Ald. J. V. Godwin by Mr. James Hanson, and printed in The Bradford Review during November, 1867, the citizens appear to have been awakened to the benefits of the public acquisition of books, and to have become interested in the literary activity which followed the passing of the Ewart Act in 1850, the Act of 1855, and its later amendment of 1866. Mr. Hanson, a Bradford worthy, with whose name the early educational history of the city must ever be closely associated, was the editor and printer of the above-named newspaper, and it was greatly the result of his strenuous advocacy of the principle of the Free Library Movement that the Finance and General Purposes Committee of the Town Council, at a meeting held in November, 1867, appointed a sub-committee " to inquire into, and report upon, the working of the Free Libraries Act in those towns in which the Act is now in force."

The report to which allusion is here made was ultimately printed, and issued to the members of the Council in March, 1868.

At that period the Act had been adopted by twenty-seven towns in England, so that the field of inquiry was fairly wide and free. We find Manchester standng foremost, chronologically, amongst those who had already adopted the Act—this in August, 1852, as the result of a public vote of 3,962 " in favour," against 40 adverse and retrogressive individuals. In the same year, by its special Act, removing the necessity of a public meeting, Liverpool had established its Reference Library in Duke Street and, in the following year, opened the North and South Lending Libraries. Although adopting the Act at the same time as the two above-named cities, the town of Bolton did not open its Library to the public until October, 1853. One must not overlook the claims of the City of Norwich as to being early in the field, the Act of 1850 having been adopted by the citizens within seven weeks of the "royal assent"; but nothing materialised out of such action until the year 1857, when the library was first opened to the public.

In Yorkshire, Sheffield was in the van of the movement, giving acceptance to the Act in 1853 and with its Library available for use some three years later. Doncaster and Leeds, following the adoption each in the same year (1868), opened their Libraries respectively in 1869 and 1870. We should also mention one other Yorkshire town with priority to Bradford—Middlesborough—where the opening ceremony took place in July, 1871, three years after the establishment of the Act.

It may be mentioned that the recommendation of the Bradford Special Committee of 1868 was somewhat in advance of the popular feeling on the subject, and it was not until March 15th, 1871, that the public meeting necessary to the adoption of the Libraies Act was held, the Mayor, Mr. Mark Dawson, presiding. The meeting, however, was not without protesting voices, and fearful pictures of the people being driven beyond the borders of the town, to escape the payment of the Library rate, were presented by the opponents of the Act. Even at that time the " fiction bogey " was in a healthy state, and, at the assembly referred to, was raised to terrorise the advocates of the Free Library. The feeling of the meeting was overwhelmingly in favour of the establishment of a library, and, with the result of a vote giving the legal power to the Council, a committee was appointed on the 13th, of June to carry the Act into effect. An advertisement for suitable premises was issued and these were ultimately met in a suite of rooms in Tyrrel Street, with an entrance also from New Market Street, now known as Town Hall Square. The nucleus of the Library was found in a collection of 13,000 volumes left for sale on the death of an alderman of the borough (Mr. Samuel Smith) and offered to the Council for the sum of £700. The collection was secured intact for the sum named and transferred to the town for a like amount. Shortly before the time fixed for the opening of the Library it was found that additional space would be required beyond that originally contemplated—a further 5,000 volumes having been purchased during the preparation for tenancy.

The Reference Library and Reading Rooms were opened on June 15th., 1872 A report published in the following October showed that 60,000 persons had visited the rooms and 9,000 volumes had been issued in the Reference Library.

The Lending Library was opened on February 17th., 1873, with a collection of 7,500 volumes, a further number of 4,500 being added during the first year's working. During the first eight months the readers numbered 4,200, and the attitude of the public clearly indicated that Bradford had long been awaiting the benefits of the public acquisition of reading matter. The number of books consulted during the year ending August, 1873, reached the total of 28,193.

As we have previously noted, the advantages and elevating influences of the Library movement did not lack appreciation from the Bradfordians of that day, and it was soon evident that the temporary premises in Tyrrel Street were inadequate to the work of the institution and the demands of the reading public. One of the most important subjects which engaged the attention of the Committee during the year 1875 was the arrangement for more commodious premises for a Central Library. In conjunction with the Markets Committee there matured a scheme to provide rooms specially adapted for Library and Reading Room purposes in the block of premises then being planned for the latter-named Committee and now known as the Kirkgate Market Buildings.

It was not until January, 1878, that the Committee were enabled to make the removal from the Tyrrel Street buildings. Originally, it was intended to occupy the whole of the new premises for Library purposes, but the want being very generally experienced of a suitable place to display works of science and art a re-arrangement of the plans resulted in provision being made for a Public Art Museum in the same building. But later years revealed the fact that whilst advisable in intention, and doubtless beneficial in its results artistically, this decision was detrimental to the Library movement, and retarded the expansion of its utility to the town. Not many years had passed before the cramped conditions of working were experienced equally by the staff and the public, a state of things which continued and grew in degree until the general reconstruction of the departments, which occurred in 1905.

Mr. Virgo, who had occupied the post of Chief Librarian from the adoption of the Act, received, in September, 1884, the appointment of Curator of the Queen's Park Museum under the Manchester Corporation. This necessitated a rearrangement of the staff, with the result that Mr. Butler Wood became Chief Librarian and Secretary, and afterwards Director of the Art Gallery, a position he has filled with conspicuous success since the date named.

In May, 1898, Lord Masham offered to the city a sum of £40,000 for the erection of an Art Gallery and Museum for the purpose of commemorating the achievements of Dr. Edmund Cartwright, the inventor of the power loom, and to be known as The Cartwright Memorial Hall. In consequence of a building trades dispute the erection of the Hall progressed very slowly, but the work was specially expedited so as to have the building finished by the time of the Inaugural Exhibition, which was held in Lister Park from May to October, 1904. The opening of the Exhibition was performed by Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary (then the Prince and Princess of Wales), on May 4th., the late Lord Masham a few weeks previously (April 13th) having suitably inaugurated the opening of the Hall. The opening of the Cartwright Memorial Hall brought the long-needed relief to the staff and public accommodation at the Library, and with the large area of the top floor of the buildings now vacant the Committee set to work on the reconstruction of the various departments. No time was lost in bringing about the alterations, and the frequenters of the Central Library and News Room welcomed the change from the old conditions which, although well utilised, had long been far from ample.

By this arrangement of the various floors, it may be noted, the Darley Street premises were at last adapted to the purposes for which they were originally intended when the building was planned 41 years ago. With regard to valuable bequests and gifts of books, Bradford has not been so fortunate as many other cities and towns in the country, and, with the exception of the handsome gift of the Hanson Library, the collection of practically the whole of its 180,000 volumes has been the result of internal effort; of keen watchfulness for the necessary, useful, and appropriate; and of careful discrimination in the outlay of a never too copious income. Yet, without external aid, the city has become possessed of a notable library of local and county literature, a most important feature of which is the collection of MSS. left by the late Edward Hailstone, Esq., of Walton Hall, near Wakefield. Another valuable local record, acquired by the Committee a few years ago, is the original MS. of Lord Fairfax's "Short Memorial," which describes the military operations in the district during the siege of Bradford in 1643.

Amongst other special collections may be mentioned the Federer Library of Yorkshire Literature, consisting of about 9,000 items (acquired in 1908) and the very notable bequest of the late J. Norton Dickons, author of Bibliotheca Bradfordiensis. The latter-named collection contains some of the choicest topographical rarities appertaining to Yorkshire.

The Library service now consists of Central premises and 26 Branch departments. During the past year (1916) over 911,000 volumes were loaned to, or consulted by, the reading public of the locality. Hopes are entertained that ere long the city will possess a Central Library building worthy of its valuable contents. The opportunity presents itself in the scheme, now before the local authorities, for a new Central Area planning. Much of the old warehouse property has already been demolished with a view to a new and civically-directed structural improvement, but in the light of our great national trials of the last three years the contemplated changes are likely to be deferred. In that case we feel that such a structural luxury as a new Central Library will be put in the category of "things for which we can wait" until brighter and more prosperous and peaceful days.

Early Printers, Publishers and Booksellers. From the record books of the Bradford Library, mentioned in the foregoing pages, one gets an insight into the earliest efforts of printing in the town. In the Library's minute book of 1781 we learn that certain accounts for printing were paid to John Nicholson of Kirkgate. The Nicholsons were the pioneer printers in Bradford and the earliest-known dated book printed in the town was issued from their press, the title of the work being:—A Sermon, occasioned by the Death of Mrs. Philipps, preached at Keighley, in Yorkshire, July 11, 1784. By the Rev. T. Lillie, Minister at Bingley. This was printed in 1785, some four years later than the above-mentioned date in the minute-book. It should be noted, however, that the former instance was no indication that the work charged for was necessarily executed in the town, for, as we will show a little farther on, most of the early Bradford-published literature was printed elsewhere. But amongst other works known to have emanated from local presses the following may be mentioned, the name in parenthesis indicating the printer:—An attempt to assist Youth in the great and important work of Religion, by the Rev. John Crosse, 1787 (Nicholsons') ; Observations upon the Bill presented to Parliament, for preventing the Exportation of Wool, by J. Hustler, 1787 (Nicholsons') ; Hymns, by the Rev. S. Medley of Liverpool, 1789 (George Nicholson) ; The Prosperity of a Gospel Church considered in a Sermon delivered at the Ebenezer Chapel at Leeds, June 14, 1789. (Geo. Nicholson) ; Rules of the Political Book Club, Bradford. 1793 (Geo. Nicholson) ; A Letter to the Proprietors of the Leeds and Liverpool Canal occasioned by Mr. Whyman's Address to those Proprietors upon the proposed deviation of the line of that Canal. By J. Priestley, 1793 (Geo. Nicholson) ; Extract from a sermon preached by the Bishop of London at the Chapel Royal on the 26th, of February last, 1800 (R. Sedgwick.)

The late Mr. J. Norton Dickons, whose Bibliotheca Bradfordiensis is a standing monument to his industry and enthusiasm as a collector, left little doubt in the matter of the origins of Bradford publishing, although, like others who have attempted the task, he was bound to admit that the first establishment of a printing press in Bradford is involved in some obscurity. It is known, however, that prior to 1781 both Leeds and Halifax printers were employed by Bradford booksellers. Probably the four earliest Bradford published books are those named in the following lines :—The Manifold Evidence of the Being of God considered in a Sermon preached in the Parish Qhurch of Bradford, by the Rev. B. Kennell M.A., (Vicar) on Sunday September 16th., 1744 (printed in Leeds 1745) ; A Pocket Companion for Harrowgate Spaw, Published originally by J. French, M.D. (printed by P. Darby, Halifax for J. Wood, in Ivegate, Bradford 1760) ; The Memoirs of General Fairfax (printed by J. Bowling in Leeds and sold by J. Hartley and G. Nicholson in Bradford 1776) ; Poems on Several Occasions, by the Rev. Mr. John Pomfret (printed by John Darling, Edinburgh, and sold by John Nicholson and Son, Booksellers, Bradford, 1783).

Dudley Rockett, of Goodman's End (a local place-name associated with the vicariate of the town) is the earliest recorded bookseller and stationer in Bradford, but it is not at all probable that he essayed the craft of printing in any form. Beyond the fact that Rockett's name appears in the list of provincial booksellers given in the "Harleian Miscellany" of 1744, little is known of him in the literary history of Bradford. Besides the Nicholsons (of whom as a notable family of printers in various provincial towns Mr. Chas. W. Sutton, M.A., has written at length in the Dictionary of National Biography) other names appear on the imprints of local publications issued in the later years of the eighteenth and early years of the nineteenth centuries. Among these are Richard Sedgwick, John Smith, Thomas Inkersley, Spencer, John Blackburn and Son., Henry Wardman and Charles Stanfield. It may be said, however, that not all these men were owners of presses, but, like many other stationers of that period, received orders for work which they secretly sent elsewhere to be executed. With regard to the case of Sedgwick however, it is certainly known that his work was performed in the then main thoroughfare of the town, Westgate, the earliest traced of his productions being Four Addresses to the People of England, intended to have been spoken in the first general Convention, by the author of a concise sketch of the intended revolution. This bears the date of 1795. John Smith carried on the trade of a stationer and bookseller in the same locality as Sedgwick and was succeeded by his nephew, John Stanfield, who in turn handed over the business to Charles Stanfield, the publisher of James's History of Bradford. Until his death about the year 1837 the most prolific of the printers in the town was Thomas Inkersley, who was notably associated with the Rev. Patrick Brontë in publishing the now much sought-after works of that divine, The Cottage in the Wood and The Maid of Killarney. Inkersley's earliest publications date about the year 1814. To the Blackburn family belongs the credit of printing the first periodical publication issued in Bradford :—The Bradford Instructive and Entertaining Miscellany (1818)—one of the many of that class of opus. which we now carelessly throw aside whilst wading through the "twopenny box" or the sidewalk barrow. Twelve monthly parts at threepence each were issued. Upon the records and output of the other printers above named we need not dilate in a contribution of this extent, and so pass on to the Newspaper Press.

The Newspaper Press. The story of the Bradford Newspaper Press has been ably dealt with by several writers, notably by Mr. William Scruton, in various Yorkshire periodicals, and especially in full measure by Mr. Butler Wood, in the Bradford Antiquary for July 1907. Beyond a brief outline of the story I do not intend to dwell upon that particular phase of typographical record. The first newspaper published in Bradford was The Bradford Courier and West Riding Advertiser. The first number was issued on July 14th., 1825, and the last on April 10th., 1828. In the meantime there had existed a rival paper, The Bradford and Wakefield Chronicle, which had entered the field of competition only nine days after the appearance of the Courier, but, after a gradual decline, ceased its mission on April 29th., 1826. From the above it will be evident that the Bradford reader was dependent upon newspapers published elsewhere (mainly Leeds) until the appearance of the Bradford Observer on February 6th., 1834. Issued originally as a weekly, the paper continued as such until its daily appearance began on October 5th., 1868. With the change of title to that of Yorkshire Observer, on November 18th., 1901, the paper has flourished as the representative organ of "Worstedopolis." In the meantime there had appeared as rival journals The Bradford Herald (January 6th. 1842) of which only a few numbers appeared; The Bradford Times (Februry 18th, 1854) also short-,lived; The Bradford Chronicle (July 1854); and The Bradford Advertiser, first published in May, 1855. These were all well-intended but unfortunate speculations, and could not sustain the rivalry offered to The Observer by such a paper as The Bradford Review. This journal was first issued (as a weekly) on January 16th., 1858. Some three years later it appeared as a bi-weekly and on September 1st.,1869, ventured forth as a daily, but after a spasmodic career ended finally as a weekly with the issue of February 12th., 1870. A second Bradford Times, founded by William Cooke, ran a short but unprofitable life, first as a weekly and later as a daily, between June 24th., 1865, and April 1st., 1871. The Bradford Daily Telegraph, the first evening paper, began its existence on July 16th., 1868, and still thrives. To shorten this record I will give briefly the names of other journalistic ventures, the dates in parentheses denoting the first appearance:—The Bradford Weekly Telegraph (July 13th., 1869); Daily Review (Sept. 1 st., 1869); Evening Mail (Sept. 18th., 1871); Daily Chronicle (Oct. 1st., 1872); Times (Oct. 1880) and The Daily Argus (June 16th., 1892). Of these only the first and last named survive

(A SUPPLEMENT TO 'BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS')

NOTES FROM SOTHEBY'S

Being a compilation of 2,032 Notes from Catalogues of Book-Sales which have taken place in the rooms of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, between the years 1885–1909, edited by Frank Karslake. Square 8vo., with a frontispiece of the Amherst Sale, and key-plate of names. £1 1s. net.

The wonderful amount of interesting information which it contains makes it invaluable as a work of reference. The 'Notes' are arranged in a single alphabet, thus allowing of instantaneous reference. A good note will often sell a book or induce one to buy it. The volume should be in the possession of every subscriber to B.A.R. Only 40 copies are now left of an edition of 1000. It will be sent on approval to any applicant, so you can see if it is worth having before deciding.

It is not every new subscriber who will understand the importance of the records of American sales which now appear in B. A. R. It lies in the fact that America is the largest market outside our own country for scarce books, and that it is desirable to know what prices are being obtained in the States for such books as we export there. By those who realize the value of these records much appreciation of them has been shown.

* * *

Realizing the difficulty experienced by some in translating dollars into pounds I shall in future give, as nearly as possible, the English equivalents of the prices of those books in the American sales which are recorded in B. A. R. The said equivalents can never be exactly correct, as the exchange varies from day to day according to economic conditions, but they will be so near as, for all practical purposes, to represent the English prices, in addition to the prices in dollars. I hope all subscribers will vote this to be one more improvement in the system of B. A. R. Some instances occur in the present Part, but in Part 3 the plan will be adopted throughout.

* * *

A subscriber who is now in the army asks me to state that there is a great demand for light but cheap literature in the camps, such, for instance, as the " sevenpenny " novels, second-hand, and especially for such authors as Dickens, Thackeray, etc. There could be no harm in writing to the C. O. of any camp, offering to supply such books.

* * *

In the Watts-Dunton sale this quarter there were somewhere about a hundred volumes which bore presentation inscriptions from Swinburne to Watts-Dunton. Most of the editions were modern books, worth a mere trifle but for the inscriptions. They realized an average of £1 per volume. A few of them which were of exceptional interest are recorded here, but the majority are not, as they would be useless as indications of real values.

Let me advise those subscribers who have not yet bought a copy of Notes from Sotheby's to read the advertisement of it printed at the foot of the previous page. There is no space to print what buyers of it have said about it, but the following instance came to my knowledge a few days after it was issued. A London bookseller bought it for a guinea, and on the first page was a note about a book which he had priced £10 10s., and had not sold. The note seemed so good that he re-catalogued the book, added the note, and also added £3 3s. to the price. The result was that he had three orders for that book, so he not only got back the guinea he had paid for Notes but made an additional profit of £2 2s. and has ever since had the other 2,031 notes for further use. Yet there are actually some slow-coaches who boggle at spending a guinea on a work of reference ! Is it any wonder that you never hear of them ?

Did you read Mr. Gerard T. Meynell's letter in The Times Literary Supplement of May 3rd. on the subject of private presses ? If not, you should do so. It is delightful for its plain speaking, its forceful diction and its attack upon the rather " precious " persons who have run the said presses. Mr. Meynell says what many have long been thinking. Here is one extract from the letter :—

> " Let us remember that there is nothing very original about those who run our private presses ; they nearly always, as I have said, steal the designs for their type, and they nearly always steal the matter they print."

Isn't it lovely ?

Kindly refer to page 558 of vol. 13 of B. A. R. There you will find the following entry :—Cruikshank (R.) Proteus, 1822 180
The " 180 " should be crossed out, and " 39 " be written in. It is one of those minor errors which are easily corrected.

On March 21, 1917, an autograph letter by Oscar Wilde to Mrs. Bernard Beere was sold by the Anderson Auction Company, New York, for $175.00 (£35). It consisted of 8 pages, 4to., and the following extract was given as a taste of its quality. It is much too good to be lost, and one only wishes the entire letter were before us. It was written from Kansas City, and was undated.

" I have lectured to the Mormons—the Opera House at Salt Lake is an enormous affair about the size of Covent Garden, and holds with ease 14 families. They sit like this [then follows a humorous diagram depicting the multiplicity of Mormon wives as they were grouped in his audience]. The President, a nice old man, sat with 5 wives in the stage box. I visited him in the afternoon and saw a charming daughter of his.

I have also lectured at Leadville, the great mining city in the Rocky Mountains. We took a whole day to get up to it on a narrow gauge railway 14,000 feet in height. My audience was entirely miners ; their make-up excellent : red shirts and blond beards, the whole of the first three rows being filled with McKee Rankins of every colour and diversion. I spoke to them of the early Florentines, and they slept as though no crime had ever stained the ravings of their mountain home. I described to them the pictures of Botticelli, and the name, which seemed to them like a new drink, roused them from their dreams, but when I told them in my boyish eloquence of the secret of Botticelli the strong men wept like children.

Unluckily I described one of Jimmy Whistler's nocturnes in blue and gold. Then they leaped to their feet and in their grand simple way swore that such things should not be. Some of the younger ones pulled their revolvers out and left hurriedly to see if Jimmy was ' prowling about the saloons ' or ' wrastling a hash.' "

In The Examiner, Feb. 7, 1852, Tennyson's poem, Hands All Round, was published It was first reprinted in 1882, but, as Mr. Wise states in his Bibliography of Tennyson, "the poet revised his work so freely that the poem was practically re-written." Among the lines omitted from the reprint were the following, and they are so appropriate at the present moment that I am sure subscribers to B.A.R. will welcome their resuscitation :

Gigantic daughter of the West,
We drink to thee across the flood,
We know thee most, we love thee best,
For art thou not of British blood ?
Should war's mad blast again be blown,
Permit not thou the tyrant powers
To fight thy Mother here alone,
But let thy broadsides roar with ours.
Hands all round !
God the tyrant's cause confound !
To our great kinsmen of the West, my friends
And the great name of England round and round.
O rise, our strong Atlantic sons,
When war against our freedom springs !
O speak to Europe through your guns,
They can be understood by Kings.

* * * *

And now, when will the first contingent of the Expeditionary Force arrive from New York? For we want to see " Old Glory " floating proudly down the Strand ; we shall husky grow with cheering at the sight ; and the " Star Spangled Banner " stir our pulses as the band leads the boys in blue and grey to Freedom's fight. And I can prophecy that that contingent will get such a reception here as no other soldiers from abroad have ever before got.

Northamptonshire Printing, Printers and Booksellers

By REGINALD W. BROWN, F.L.A.

Chief Librarian, Northampton Public Library

President of the North Midland Library Association

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE is noted for its 'Spires and Squires,' and its historical associations are legion. It is not the object of this paper to deal with that interesting aspect, but to consider briefly the part played by early printers in the history of typography. To judge from the large number of works dealing with the locality, and books by local authors in the Local Collection of the Northampton Reference Library, as well as those recorded in Taylor's Bibliotheca Northantoniensis, from about the middle of the eighteenth to the middle of the nineteenth century local printers were very busy. It is remarkable that the majority of enquiries, in fact we might say all, relating to the bibliography of Northamptonshire, particularly respecting books printed locally, come from outside the area in which they were issued. The Local Collection covers a very wide area and is composed of 3,024 local books and pamphlets, 2,968 books and pamphlets by local authors, and over 800 local engravings of the town and county. The library of John Clare, the peasant poet, consisting of 240 books, is also housed there. From the local collection the information embodied in this article is chiefly taken, and some 4,000 books and pamphlets have been examined as well as the 30,000 entries in the Bibliotheca Northantoniensis. It is hoped in the near future to compile a list of all the books printed in the county, and to arrange the titles chronologically under the names of the printers. It would be of immense value to Libraries if the Copyright Act could be so amended that a duplicate list of books printed in the county could be sent to each county town library of the items submitted to the various libraries under the Act.

The first book printed in Northamptonshire was one of the Martin Marprelate tracts. It was issued in November and December 1588. The press was only migratory and was put up at Fawsley mansion by Sir Richard Knightley, Baronet, where it was used for the purpose of secretly printing the Tract. The printing press from which a series of these tracts was issued was taken about the country, from one place to another, always carefully concealed. Sir Richard Knightley was one of the participators in the movement, and the press was brought to his seat at Fawsley.

> "Sir Rich. Knightly, in his examination, confessed that at his house at at Fausley, a book called "The Epitome" was printed. The printing press brought to his house there by Jeffs, a tenant of his son. From whence the pres was carried to his house at Norton, about Christmas last (1588)"—Strype's Annals.

According to tradition it was set up in the little room above the window of the old hall, but Sir Richard, himself, in his trial before the Star Chamber, subsequently averred that it was set up in the nursery. The Puritan libels were generally printed by one Walgrave; he had a travelling press for this purpose; it was removed from Mousley, near Kingston upon Thames, to Fawsley. Wood says, in the Life of Penry, "printed by stealth, partly in that nest of rigid puritans and schismatics at Fawsley, in Northamptonshire, and partly in Coventry, and elsewhere."—Ath. Ox., by Bliss, Vol. 1. p. 595. Mr. Arber, in his most exhaustive paper on this subject, states that "the Epitome was printed at Fawsley in Nov-Dec. 1588 and was issued about Feb. 2, 1589." A fine of £10,000 was inflicted upon Sir Richard Knightley, but greatly abated at the intervention of Archbishop Whitgift.

It is a remarkable thing that whilst in the sixteenth century a private printing press was set up surreptiously in Northamptonshire, at Fawsley Park, or, as an old tract gives it, " between the skye and the grounde wythin a myle of an Oake," it was not until a century and a half had elapsed that the Art of printing established itself in Northampton, (1720).

The earliest printing press which we have been able to trace in the county of Northampton, excluding Fawsley Press which was only migratory, is that established in Daventry in 1720 by John Smith. To Daventry also belongs the first Northamptonshire (excluding the county town) bookseller, Obadiah Smith, 1689-1720. Although the earliest emanation from a Northampton press was the first number of the ' Northampton Mercury,' which was issued on May 2nd 1720, there were several books issued previous to that date, which, although printed in London and elsewhere, contain in the imprint names of local booksellers. They are enumerated here as being of interest. The earliest instance of this is a volume printed for Peter Whaley of Northampton, 1641. The title-page is as follows :—' Superstitio Superstes : or, The Reliques of Superstition Newly Revived. Manifested in a Discourse concerning the Holineffe of Churches, and bowing towards the Altar. Whereunto is added a Cenfure of two Letters, touching the fame Subject. The one wirtten by Doct. M. the other by M. Meade. By D. Cawdrey.' London. Printed for Peter Whaley of Northampton, 1641. Daniel Cawdrey was the Rector of Great Billing, Northamptonshire. The next item we come across is ' A Sermon Preached Decemb. 16. 1654. At the Funerall of Mr. Andrew Pern, Preacher of the Word of God at Wilby in Northamptonshire.' By Samuel Ainsworth Rector of Kelmarsh. London, Printed for William Gilbertson, and are to be sold by Thomas Collins neare Alhallows Church in Northampton 1655. In the year 1657 the following book was printed ' Christ, God-Man, Set out in a Sermon, Preached at Northampton on the Lecture being Christmas-Day, 1656.' By John Howes, sometime Fellow of Gonvil-Caius Colledge in Cambridge ; now Minister of Gods Word at Abington. London. Printed for Joseph Nevill at the Plough in Paul's Church-yard, and William Cockrain, Bookseller in Northampton, 1657. ' The State of Northampton From the beginning of the Fire,' which was printed in 1675, spells the name of the above bookseller viz. : Cockeraine.

The Diceys were the first to establish a printing press in the town of Northampton and are by far the most noted of local printers. The St. Ives Mercury, which was printed by R. Raikes and W. Dicey, and was also the first newspaper printed by them, was very soon followed by the establishment of The Northampton Mercury in May, 1720. The Northampton Mercury is the oldest paper in the country with a continuous and constant publication for so long a period. The woodcuts used in the production of this paper were made on the premises. The Mercury was printed in George Row until 1730, when the office on the Parade was opened. The issue of The Northampton Mercury dated May 2nd, 1885, was the last number issued by the Diceys. Thus for 165 years, every issue of this paper bore the Dicey imprint.

The title page of The Northampton Mercury runs as follows :—Northampton Mercury ; or the Monday's Post. Being a Collection of the most Material Occurrences, Foreign & Domestick, Together with An Account of Trade. Monday, May 2, 1720. To be continued weekly, Northampton ; Printed by R. Raikes and W. Dicey, near All Saints Church, where Advertisements and Letters of Correspondents are taken in, and all manner of Books printed. A complete file of the Mercury from the first number to the current issue is housed in the Northampton Reference Library and is referred to almost every day without exception. The file of the Mercury from 1720 to 1860 was presented to the Library Committee by Mr. A. V. Dicey in May 1885. An Index to the first 150 years has been compiled and will prove useful until a more elaborate and systematic Index can be made The contents of the first number of the Mercury contained no news of a local character. The early volumes were illustrated with curious woodcuts, so that the Mercury was one of the earliest specimens of illustrated journalism.

Robert Raikes was the father of the founder of Sunday Schools. The Mercury remained in the possession of the Dicey family until May, 1st 1885, when it was sold to S. S. Campion.

The Gloucester Journal was printed and published by Robert Raikes, who was also a partner in the Mercury. Mr. Raikes was one of the first provincial proprietors of a newspaper who ventured to insert the Reports of the proceedings in Parliament, and we find that in 1728 a complaint was lodged against him on that account. Mr. Cave was taken into custody of the sergeant-at-arms by order of the House of Commons, for furnishing Mr. Raikes with the minutes thereof. After several days confinement, and expressing his contrition for the offence, he was liberated. In the following year Mr. Raikes again incurred the censure of the House of Commons by repeating the offence.

A Mr. Herbert E. Norris, in 'Notes and Queries' Dec. 17, 1910, says in writing about The St. Ives Mercury, "This copy of The St. Ives Mercury (in his possession) is extremely interesting, as it is the exact model and forerunner of The Northampton Mercury of 2 May 1720, and of The Gloucester Journal by Raikes, 9 April, 1722, and these two papers are still being published, with unbroken records of nearly 200 years."

It is interesting to note what reception any rival in the newspaper world received. John Pasham, a bookseller in Northampton, published The Northampton Journal in 1722, but it did not live long. The following appeared in The Northampton Mercury July 7, 1772. "The readers of this Northampton Mercury are desired to take Notice, that the Printers hereof (R. Raikes and W. Dicey) have not thought fit to alter the Cut in their Title-Page, the Manner of Folding their Paper, nor the Day of Publishing it: But, a Sheepskin Projector having offer'd to the Publick a Sheet and a Half of Waste Paper, embellished with the intended Effigie of her late Majesty Q. Anne, but more like the Wooden Head of the Artist that did it, when stuck upon Tenterhooks, and thrust it into the World under the Name of Northampton Journal, designing to make use of the Word Northampton as a Cloak to introduce a Novice into the Custom of some few of our Well-wishers: We therefore take the opportunity to warn them of the Design which cannot but be honourable in Men of Hide-bound Principles, like the new upstart Author, who bigotted in himself, and ventured in his foolish Opinion by others, has lavishly thrown away Money on a Press, more for the Consumption of Paper, than the Benefit he can pretend will accrue to him, or his "

On July 22, 1722, is inserted "a Specimen of the Curiosities contained in Pasham's Northampton Journal of July 7 & 14," in which is stated " . . . there is no danger of this Journal's ever meriting the Pillory, or to die by the hands of the Executioner, (for it will soon execute itself)."

A few months after the publication of The Northampton Mercury was issued The Northampton Miscellany. It was a crown 8vo. periodical of which the full title runs as follows:—

> "The Northampton Miscellany, or Monthly Amusements, &c. Calculated for the Diversion of the Country and the Profit of the Printer. Vol. I. January 31, 1720-1. Northampton: Printed by R. Raikes, and W. Dicey, and Sold by J. Weale, Bookseller in Bedford, G. Ratton; in Harborough, P. Gibson, in Wisbech, and W. Peachy, near St. Bernet's Church in Cambridge. (Pr. 6d, or 12d. per Quarter.)"

A letter in verse, "from a Gentleman in Lincolnshire to his Friend in Northampton," begins:—

> "Happy are you that breathe Northampton Air,
> And drink of rapid Streams as Chrystal clear;"

It is doubtful whether the entire issue of The Northampton Miscellany extended beyond six monthly numbers. The June number was last advertised in The Northampton Mercury of August 21, 1721. Under the advertisement in the previous week (August 14) appears the following:—"Note, There is in the Press a Second Edition of this Month's Miscellany (it having met with an unexpected Run) which will be publish'd next week."

A periodical called The Northamptonshire Journal, with the History of the Old and New Testaments, dated Thursday, March 19, 1741, and consisting of a summary of home and foreign news, with two or three advertisements, was supposed to have been printed by Dicey, and there is at least one reference to it in the Mercury. The "History of the Old and New Testaments" was probably in the nature of a supplement. There is no copy of this periodical in the British Museum but a fragment is preserved in the Northampton Reference Library.

The British Museum contains a unique specimen of a Northampton-printed book; a Dicey Chap Book, dated 1725. The tract was purchased some years ago at the sale of the library of the late Mr. Halliwell-Phillips. The life of Jonathan Wild was a favourite subject in the earlier part of the 18th century. The particular version published at Northampton was, undoubtedly, like the life of many another notorious villain, issued immediately after the execution of Wild. The title is as follows:—

> The Life of Jonathan Wilde (sic.), Thief-Taker General of Great Britain and Ireland, from His Birth to his Death. Containing His Rise and Progress in Roguery; his first Acquaintance with THIEVES: by what Arts he made himself their Head or Governor; his Discipline over them; his Policy and great Cunning in Governing them; and the several Classes of Thieves under his Command. In which all His Intrigues, Plots, and Artifices, are Accounted for, and laid Open. Intermix'd with Variety of diverting Stories. Taken chiefly from his own private Journals, and daily Transactions of his Life, as found amongst his Papers, since his first being Apprehended. Northampton: Printed by W. Dicey, 1725. [Price 4d.]

We are able by advertisements to trace the dates of issue of the various chap books printed by the Diceys at Northampton; but there is considerable difficulty in similarly dating the appearance of Dicey books printed in London. It is believed that the place first mentioned on these tracts is Aldermary Churchyard but the name 'Dicey' is seldom upon them. It is said that the press thence removed to Bow Churchyard; and we have numerous chap books, and other productions of the press, issued from there. Mr. Ashton, in his 'Chap Books of the Eighteenth Century,' give a list of 124 books as being issued by the Diceys, without, however, a single fact to warrant his theory that most of those he mentions were really printed by any one of the Diceys; neither does he afford any clue as to where the books he names can be seen. In the collection of the late Mr. John Wallis, of Kettering, was a fine series of maps and other publications issued from the Dicey press. They were purchased by the late Mr. John Taylor, of Northampton.

Northamptonshire Booksellers

Thomas Payne, an eminent bibliopolist of the very first reputation in the 18th century, was son of Oliver and Martha Payne of Brackley. He was for more than 40 years a bookseller at the Mews-Gate, and began his career in Round-court in the Strand, opposite York buildings; where, after being some years an assistant to his elder brother, Olive Payne (with whom the idea and practice of printing catalogues is said to have originated), he commenced bookseller on his own account, and issued 'A Catalogue of Curious Books in Divinity, History, Classicks, Medicine, Voyages, Natural History, &c. Greek, Latin, French, Italian, and Spanish, in excellent condition, and mostly gilt and lettered," dated Feb. 29, 1740, being almost the first of the cataloguists, except Daniel Brown, at the Black Swan without Temple Bar, and the short-lived Meers and Noorthouck. From this situation he removed to the Mews-gate in 1750, when he married Elizabeth Taylor, and succeeded her brother in the shop and house, which he built, whence he issued an almost annual succession of catalogues, beginning 1755; and, in the years 1760 and 1761, two catalogues during the year; a list of which may be seen in the Gent. Mag. Vol. LXIV., p. 901. This he continued to do till 1790, when he resigned his business to his eldest son. The father was the London agent for the sale of Bridges' History of Northamptonshire. This book was issued in 1791, and 'Sold by T. Payne, London: D. Prince and J. Cooke Oxford; and Mr. Lacy, Northampton.' The British Museum and Bodleian Libraries possess copies of most of the catalogues issued by Thomas Payne and his son.

John Simco, son of Samuel and Ann Simco, was born at Towcester about 1749. He appears to have been very successful in business as a bookseller, and in collecting rare books, papers, prints, &c., many of them relating to his native county; some of which he bequeathed in his will to the British Museum, upon conditions, as the following extracts from his will shew:—

"I bequeath also to the British Museum my History of Northamptonshire, in four volumes, folio, illustrated with Prints and Drawings, and three Port Folios of Drawings collected for it. Also my Lyson's Environs of London, illustrated in Eleven Volumes, with four Volumes of Drawings collected for it, in three volumes; and my History of St. Albans, and History of Derbyshire, in three volumes, folio, illustrated with Prints and Drawings. Upon condition of their paying my Executors Five Hundred Pounds, not half what it cost me, to be preserved there." The authorities of the Museum declined the bequest upon the conditions set out above. John Simco was brought up to the baking business, but not liking that work went to London, and engaged himself as a servant to Mr. Henry Chapman, a bookseller in Old Round Court in the Strand, where he continued some time. He afterwards lived with Mr. Samuel Hayes, an eminent bookseller, in Oxford Street; he took lodgings soon after in Leather Lane, Holborn, and commenced business as a Print-seller in a private way. His knowledge of portraits was very great, so that he had scarce his equal. He afterwards opened a shop in Great Queen Street, Lincoln's Inn; the situation not suiting his connection he removed to Air Street, Piccadilly, where he died 1824. His books were sold by Auction by Mr. Sotheby, and his Prints and Drawings the 3rd of February and the five following days. Mr. Simco issued catalogues from time to time, the earliest being dated 1788. The catalogues, with prices realized and names of the purchasers, are in the British Museum. An obituary notice of Simco appeared in the 'Annual Obituary and Biography', 1825. The tablet to his memory in S. James' churchyard bears the following inscription:—"In Memory of John Simco of Air Street Bookseller who died Feb. 2nd 1824 Aged Seventy Six. A Sincere Christian."

John Cole (1792-1848) bookseller and antiquary, of Northampton and Scarborough, was born 3rd. Oct. 1792 at Weston Favell, in Northamptonshire. He began his literary career with a 'History of Northampton and its Vicinity' in 1815. In 1817 he purchased, for £1,000, the stock and goodwill of a bookseller at Lincoln. He issued most of his antiquarian and biographical works, many of which relate to Scarborough. He also helped Baker in his 'History of the County of Northampton.' Cole tried Northampton once more after unsuccessful attempts in several other places, and opened a shop in the Market Square about the year 1833. He instituted the commemoration in honour of the Rev. James Hervey, held at Weston Favell on 18 June 1833. His publications are over a hundred in number. (Dict. Nat. Biog.)

The Northampton Public Library contains about 40 works by John Cole, a number of which are in MS. and contain water-colour and pencil drawings, by William L. Cole. A complete list of his works appears in the Dict. of Nat. Biog. The following items in MS. are in the Northampton Reference Library:—

History and Antiquities of Thrapston; of Ecton; of Woodford; of Polebrook. 3 V.; of Barnwell; and of Twywell.

Mr. John Taylor, a Northampton printer and bookseller, was born at Northampton on April 13th 1831. He was apprenticed to the printing trade in London but in 1853 joined his father in business as printers and booksellers at 22, Gold Street. John took full charge of the business when his father retired in 1862. He printed a large number of books, among which we may mention the following: 'Antiquarian Memoranda'; 'Northamptonshire Notes and Queries', commenced in 1884 and ran into 6 volumes; 'The Buildings of Sir Thomas Tresham'; 'Liber Custumarum Villae Northamptoniae'; 'Index Locorum, to Baker's 'History of Northamptonshire'; four series of local tracts; 'Northamptonshire Illustrated Almanack' 1861-1872; 'Once a Year' 1861-1872; 'Northampton Book Circular' 86 numbers; histories of various Baptist Churches; Northamptonshire Biographies and a whole host of other literature relating to local subjects. His monumental work, consisting of over 30,000 entries of books on or relating to the county, of which it is supposed that only six copies were printed, was the 'Bibliotheca Northantoniensis'. The Northampton Reference Library possesses a laid-down copy of his Bibliotheca, in 71 volumes. It is only true to say that John Taylor did more for collecting Northamptonshire matter than any one in the past and that his labours in that particular field of research will be hard to to rival. He died at Northampton, August 25th, 1901.

Nathaniel Collis, of Kettering, 1770-1792. Issued catalogues of several important libraries. The earliest of which we have met with was the entire library of the Rev. Mr. Shuter, rector of Kibworth, dated Monday, the 24th of September, 1770, and the entire library of the Rev. Mr. Boyce, Minister of Kettering, Oct. 3, 1771. In 1789, the library of the Rev. Rowland Hurst, B.D., is catalogued as being sold by Nathaniel Collis & Co. Book catalogues were issued by Nathaniel Collis (afterwards Nathaniel Collis & Co.) in 1770, 1771, 1783 and 1789. Nathaniel Collis was at one time in partnership with Mr. Dash, in the same town, and died, March, 25th, 1813.

Thomas Dash, of Kettering, 1818-1832. The Collection of pamphlets and books connected with the county, made for the most part by Thomas Dash, was, out of respect to his memory, presented by his son (Mr. William Dash) to the Northampton Reference Library. This collection comprises many tracts relating to the Northern division of the county that are unique, indeed, it would be simply impossible to obtain them at the present time. Thomas Dash issued a large number of book catalogues.

William Dash, of Kettering, 1834-1862. Son of Thomas Dash. His stock consisted of the choicest bibliography, and was of larger extent than any between London and the great libraries in the North ; this was due to Kettering being upon the chief Northern road, and was surrounded by the residences of many of the aristocracy who in those days were collectors of rare books. William Dash also issued several book catalogues. The library of William Dash was sold in 1883.

J. S. Billingham, of Northampton, started in news business in 1896. His love of books led him to take up the second-hand trade. One of his early purchases was a copy of The Arabian Nights which he bought from a stall in the Market for 9d. and sold it on the same day for 2/-. With such a bargain as this he thought himself on the road to fortune. His first business place was in Wood Street from whence he moved to Sheep Street. Soon afterwards he opened a shop at 1a Marefair and it was known as The Sign of Ye Olde Playe House as it was at one time the Northampton Theatre. Some readers of B. A. R. will doubtless recollect it as a Theatre. Four years ago he moved to 4 Marefair to larger premises, and a few months ago again took 1a Marefair as additional premises, consequent upon taking up the new book trade as well, and wanting more room. He is a frequent buyer at Messrs Hodgson's Rooms, Chancery Lane, but owing to indifferent health has not been up much for last two or three years. His catalogues are well patronised by the trade, and before the War export trade, particularly with America, was rapidly increasing. He specialises chiefly in Old English literature, but has a good general stock.

The Liber Custumarum

The Liber Custumarum Villae Northamptoniae, circa 1460, a manuscript book, of the ' Ancient Usagez and Customez ' of the town of Northampton, is preserved amongst the archives of the borough. This volume is the most quaint and valuable of all the borough records. Indeed, it is a treasure such as few English boroughs possess. It was compiled about the middle of the fifteenth century, by an unknown hand, and treats of the customs, usages, evidences, and laws then existing in the town, to which were added in subsequent times later rules and decisions. The compilation was evidently most carefully made for the purpose of preserving the records and law precedents of the Borough in accessible form, and it gives us the only knowledge we possess of much that is contained in its pages. The original documents from which the book was first compiled have been destroyed—some probably intentionally, as being of no further use after the clerkly transcript was made about 1460 ; some probably in the Great Fire of 1675, when the Guildhall was partially burnt, and many of the Corporation records were lost. The Liber Custumarum, however, was fortunately saved intact. The transcript is beautifully executed. The book consists of 148 leaves of fine vellum, 8¾ inches by 6¼ inches. The initials are mostly rubricated, but many of the capitals at the commencement of the paragraphs have not been filled in. Both the black and red inks are in good condition. The appearance of the last page indicates that after being written the manuscript was kept unbound for some years, and the binding itself is evidently thirty or forty years later than the handwriting. It is late fifteenth or early sixteenth work. The boards are of oak, and the vellum leaves are sewn round four leather bands which pass twice through the boards to afford a secure hold. The boards are covered with calf. There are four square plates of brass at the corners of each cover, and a lozenge of brass is affixed in the centre ; and in the middle of each of the ten brass plates is a small boss for ornamentation. Attached to the front cover by leather hinges were two brass clasps, of which, however, only the lower now remains. The covers were stamped front and back with a double running pattern, made up of different devices in small panels--two birds like swans addorsed with wings disclosed ; a creature like a large fish ; a fleur-de-lis ; an insect with five wings disclosed on each side, and so on. The condition of the book is excellent, nearly every letter being still perfectly legible, but there are one or two slight imperfections, such as the mutilation of a few pages. On the fly-leaves have been written a few common-law forms, two in Latin and two in mediæval English. Then follow some letters patent from the Monarch to the Mayor, leading up to the table of contents of the volume as originally transcribed. The whole book is written indifferently in contracted Latin, Norman-French, and mediæval English. The above description is taken from the Preface to the reproduction which was written by John Taylor, and which was edited by Christopher A. Markham, 1895.

Northamptonshire Authors

The earliest Northamptonshire author that we have been able to trace is Robert de Holcot. Although there is some uncertainty as to the exact birthplace of this celebrated author there is no reason to doubt that he was a native of Northamptonshire. Fuller states, both in his ' Church History ' and in his ' Worthies of England ', that he was born at Holcot, a village in the county of Northampton, and in the margin of his ' Worthies ' alleges ' Camden's Britannia in Northamptonshire ' as his authority. He might have been, however, a son of Robertus de Holcot, who was one of the Knights of the Shire in the Parliament at Westminster in the year 1328, the second year of King Edward III., as given by Bridges in his ' History of Northamptonshire ' Vol. I. p. 9. Those who consider Holcot to have been the author of the ' Philobiblon ', generally ascribed to Richard de Bury, Bishop of Durham, suppose that he was one of the chaplains, as ' the bishop had always in his house many chaplains, all great scholars '. Warton's ' History of English Poetry '

The large number of works attributed to Holcot proves that he must have been constantly employed at Oxford, and perhaps at Northampton ; at which latter place he was carried off by the plague while lecturing upon the book Ecclesiasticus, having reached the seventh chapter. He was buried in the Dominican monastery at Northampton, 1349. A list of his works will be found in Northants Notes and Queries Vol. 2, pp. 29 and 47,

Other notable local authors are Mark Akenside, Poet, 1676 ; Alban Butler, Historian, Weedon, 1742 ; John Conant, Divine, Northampton, 1693 ; Philip Doddridge, Tutor and Divine, Northampton 1737 ; John Dryden, poet Laureate Aldwinckle, 1693 ; Thomas Fuller, Historian, Aldwinckle, 1673 ; Thomas Haweis, Rector of Aldwinckle, All Saints', 1796 ; James Hervey, Weston Favell, 1748 ; Thomas Percy, Bishop of Dromore, Rector of Wilby, 1769 ; Thomas Randolph (Ben Jonson's literary son), Newnham, 1668 ; and hundreds more, too numerous to mention here.

The Northampton Reference Library has an extensive collection of works on or relating to the county, or by authors connected with the district, which were mostly acquired from the late Mr. John Taylor. Most of the items thus acquired were collected by him for the compilation of his Bibliographical list of what has been published on the history, topography, antiquities, customs, family history, &c., of Northamptonshire. The collection contains a considerable portion of the remainder of the treasures of local literature which the late George Baker, Esq., the county historian, had accumulated in the course of the preparation of his great and valuable work.

Paper mills were at work in the county as follows :—Perry Paper Mills near Oundle 1721 ; Paper Mill, Isham, 1756 ; Paper Mill, Wansford, 1756 ; Willit Paper Mills, Ringstead, 1763 ; Northampton Paper Wills, 1773. They were undoubtedly at work earlier than the years given, but it is difficult to say for how long a period after they continued as such. In the year 1773 a Mrs. Brown of Northampton advertised in The Northampton Mercury her business as a Parchment maker.

Sales of books are recorded in The Northampton Mercury as having taken place at the following Inns at Northampton :—Rose and Crown Inn, 1721 ; Hind Inn, 1724 ; Dolphin Inn, 1773 ; Saracen's Head, 1777.

Northampton Newspapers

Northamptonshire, like all other counties had, and still has, its fair share of mushroom growths in the newspaper world. Curiously enough, the first established newspaper in the county held undisputed sway over its many rivals, and more remarkable still is the fact that the same Northampton Mercury is still running. It is unnecessary to deal with the Mercury here as it has already been dealt with earlier on in this paper.

The Northampton Herald commenced on Saturday, November 12, 1831, and was printed and published by Willoughby Marshall Smithson in Sheep Street, until March 24, 1832, when the office was opened on the Market Square. On Saturday April 6th, 1833, the paper was printed and published by Charles Septimus Adkins, Market Square. The paper changed hands in 1847 and No. 53, Saturday, November 6, 1847, was printed and published by James Butterfield of Wood Street, at his office Market Square. Both C. S. Adkins and James Butterfield had their residence for a time at their office on the Market Square. The imprint changes on January 3rd, 1880, to James and Henry Butterfield, under the style of Butterfield and Son ; and on Saturday, July 6th, 1889, becomes Henry Butterfield, which imprint it still bears at the present time.

The Northampton Albion was first printed and published on Friday, June 27, 1873, by Thomas Arlidge in St. Giles' Street, near the Town Hall. On May 9th, 1874, the following sub-title was added, " and Wellingborough and Kettering Chronicle." This paper ended with the 91st. number, March 20, 1875.

The Northamptonshire Guardian, with which is incorporated The Daventry Spectator, was first printed and published by Samuel Smith Campion and Thomas Dyson Whitaker, Bearwood Street, Saturday, March 25th, 1876. The North Bucks Reporter was added to the title on January 13, 1877. Mr. S. S. Campion became the sole proprietor in 1877 and the issue for Dec. 22, 1877, was printed by him at Gold Street. The Northampton Weekly Reporter was added to the title on Saturday, May 30, 1885, and on Sept. 5th of the same year, the paper was printed at 11, Parade. On Friday, May 2nd, 1890, the Guardian was incorporated with The Northampton Mercury, which on that day celebrated its 170th birthday.

The Northampton Evening Mail was started on January 26th, 1880, and was a halfpenny evening paper, but was suspended at the end of twelve months.

The Northampton Independent, a Weekly Illustrated Journal had its beginning in Northampton Town Talk, a halfpenny monthly paper, in May, 1906. It was printed and published for and by W. Mark, The Drapery. No. 3 was issued as The Northampton Independent, with which is incorporated Town Talk, price one penny. It became a weekly Journal on Oct. 7th, 1905. The present proprietor is W. H. Holloway, and it is printed by Archer and Goodman, Wellington Street.

Other papers too numerous to mention here have had brief existences, have been long forgotten, and but briefly recorded.

(Suggestions, and offers of articles suitable for B.A.R., will be welcomed from librarians and others.)

COLLOQUIALISMS

It is curious with what emotions one turns, in the sere days, to the jubilant and ebullient days of one's youth, days, alas ! never to happen again. I have just had occasion to refer to the first catalogue issued by me as a " second-hand bookseller ", when, at 21 years of age, I, greatly daring, took a tiny shop in that dear and dirty old Booksellers' Row, in the Strand, (once known as " Butchers' Row ") in partnership with a dearly-loved brother who later on died from that curse of the human race, consumption, in far-off Auckland, in New Zealand. And here is the Address which prefaced the little catalogue :—

> F. & W. K. in issuing their first catalogue beg respectfully to inform book-collectors and gentlemen with antiquarian tastes that if on receipt of any books ordered they do not fully equal their expectations they will be most willing to have them returned, as they are fully aware that gentlemen cannot in every instance tell from a simple description whether the work is such as they desire or not. The expense of the carriage to and fro will in such cases be paid by F. & W. K. The descriptions of the books are given with as great a regard for accuracy as is possible, as they feel that only by so doing can they inspire that confidence in their customers which they are desirous of obtaining.

Now that foreword to a first catalogue, written by a youngster of 21, seems to me, at 66 years of age, to be a model of an introduction to the founding of a " second-hand " or " antiquarian " book business, and, soon after it was issued, Colonel Frank Cunningham, son of the Peter Cunningham who wrote the Life of Nell Gwynne, wrote in The Hour, (a new Conservative newspaper which " Dizzy " declined to support because he said that the only papers he read were those which opposed his policy) a eulogistic account of the catalogues which my brother and I issued. (I suppose some will say that I ought to have written " an eulogistic account ", but, as the old man in the fairy tale said, " I have my own ways of doing things," and, as in real life, no one ever says " an " before a vowel why should one say it in print ?). I suppose that, with my love of books and of bookselling, I ought by now to have been a sort of millionaire bookseller (if there is such an unfortunate being) instead of being an editor who sits all day long in a room overlooking a garden in which thrushes and blackbirds sing. But, really, I don't envy the " millionaire bookseller," who, pauvre diable, has to stew in an office from week to week, and probably shortens his life thereby. Bernard Quaritch himself told me a quarter of a century ago that every year he was poorer, for, like all other booksellers, he was always adding to his stock, and that the more stock he possessed the less interest he had upon his capital. But, I retorted, What about the enjoyment gained by having a congenial employment ? Whereupon he caved in and confessed that there is something more in life than making money ; that happiness is more than material welfare ; and that bodily health is more precious than all ; and as we now seem to be getting into the depths of platitudes it will be perhaps as well to " draw to a close," as Board-School children say when winding-up a letter.

Is there, I wonder, any subscriber of mine who has a fit of the " blues " in consequence of bad business, the War, Air Raids, or, worse than all, Air Raid Warnings. If so, don't spend money on the doctor but get the following four books by Barry Pain, (published by T. Werner Laurie, at one shilling each) :— Mrs. Murphy ; Confessions of Alphonse ; Edwards ; Me and Harris. All are illustrated. If the perusal of these productions do not cure any fit of the spleen you should make your wills and think about what place in the cemetery you would prefer to be buried in. On warm summer evenings I read them to friends in the garden, and one (a Russian lady) in particular comes specially to be " cheered-up " by hearing what Barry Pain has to say. I have never so much enjoyed any written thing since I discovered Pickwick at the age of sixteen.

In volume 2 of Forster's Life of Dickens, (pages 11-13), a portion of a letter by Dickens to an American friend, Professor Felton, is quoted, in which the writer describes a scene with George Cruikshank at the funeral of Hone, the publisher. The original letter itself was sold by Messrs Scott & O'Shaughnessy, book-auctioneers, at New York, on April 12th. last, for $320.00 (£64). The following part of the letter was not, however, printed in the Life, and as I do not know of it having been printed elsewhere, and as it is of biographical interest as regards Cruikshank, it seems worth placing on record permanently. The letter was written from Devonshire Terrace, 2nd. March, 1843, and consisted of 4 pages, 4to :—

> You know Hone's Every Day Book, I dare say. Ah ! I saw a scene of mingled comicality and seriousness at his funeral some weeks ago, which has choked me at dinner-time ever since. George Cruikshank and I went as mourners ; and as he lived, poor fellow, five miles out of town, I drove George down. It was such a day as I hope for the credit of Nature is seldom seen in any parts but these—muddy, foggy, wet, dark, cold, and unutterably wretched in every possible respect. Now, George has enormous whiskers which straggle all down his throat in such weather, and stick out in front of him, like a partially unravelled birds'-nest ; so that he looks queer enough at the best, but when he is very wet, and in a state between jollity (he is always very jolly with me) and the deepest gravity (going to a funeral, you know) it is utterly impossible to resist him : especially as he makes the strangest remarks the mind of man can conceive, without any intention of being funny, but rather meaning to be philosophical. I really cried with an irresistible sense of his comicality all the way, but when he was drest out in a black cloak and a very long black hat band by an undertaker, (who as he whispered me with tears in his eyes—for he had known Hone many years—was ' a character, and he would like to sketch him ') I thought I should have been obliged to go away.

Dickens then sends messages to Longfellow, Sumner and other friends, and concludes by stating that being " disgusted with our established church and its Puseyisms, and daily outrages on common sense and humanity, I have carried into effect an old idea of mine, and joined the Unitarians, who would do something for human improvement, if they could, and who practise charity and toleration."Forster refers (Vol. 2, page 37) to the fact that Dickens did join the Unitarians for a time, but does not give this very characteristic quotation on the subject from his letter to Felton.

* * * *

There were other of Dickens's letters in the same sale which I would dearly love to quote, for they were mostly autobiographical, and all written to Felton, who seems to have been one of his dearest American friends, but space, and my pocket, has limits while the subscription to B. A. R. is what it is. But if I could print them you should have such things galore, for it is a delight to see that they are not lost. There is a wonderfully whimsical description of himself at Broadstairs ; an account of a dinner to Macready at Richmond ; and a reference to Maclise, in which he says " He is in great favour with the Queen, and paints secret pictures for her to put upon her husband's table on the morning of his birthday—and the like. But if he has a care he will leave his mark on more enduring things than Palace Walls." Isn't it characteristic of him, even to the wrongful capitals to the last two words ?

A valuable piece of bibliographical information came to light through the sale of the Douglas copy of ' Pickwick ' recorded in this Part. It contained a letter from Mr. Eckel, author of the Bibliography of Dickens, admitting that this copy satisfied him that he was in error in stating that the plates in Part 1 were not signed. He writes :—

> I am satisfied that the original plates bore signatures and that these hair-lines wore off as the printing proceeded. It was the later issues upon which the error was based that the plates were unsigned.

HENRY LEMOINE,

The Eccentric Bookseller & Author.

Published by J. Robins & Co. Albion Press London June 1, 1821

HENRY LEMOINE

(This account of Lemoine appeared in Wilson's Wonderful Characters, 3 vols., 1821, and may be thought to be of interest. Ed.)

HENRY Lemoine, the remarkable subject of the present narrative, was born in Spitalfields in 1756. His education was at a free-school belonging to the French Calvinists, whence, at 14 years of age, he was apprenticed to a stationer and rag-merchant in Lamb-street, Spitalfields. His master was of an humble, suppliant disposition, and his humility was only equalled by his hypocrisy, by which means he made above 3000*l.*, which an adventurous young emigrant contrived after his death to defraud his widow of, and she was reduced to the workhouse. This stationer, though he dealt in books, had such an aversion to learning that he was ill-tempered whenever Lemoine was reading. Thus his servitude was enlivened by the pursuit of letters at stolen hours and borrowed from the time of rest, when, with the assistance of a lamp, he contrived to read and digest works of history, poetry, arts and sciences, being considerably assisted in his choice of subjects by a Mr. Toddy, an American loyalist. It was during this period that he began to write for the magazines, where, finding ready admission for his ingenious essays, he perhaps devoted too much of his time to those productions.

From this servitude he removed to a Mr. Chatterton's, a baker, and bookseller too, where he was articled to learn the former business. Chatterton was well known among the bibliopoles of the metropolis for his knowledge in the old puritanical divinity of Charles and Cromwell's time, and for a short distich over his window, which he had borrowed from one Roberts, an old wine merchant in the Borough, as follows; only substituting bread for wine:

Two trades united which you seldom find,
Bread to refresh the body, books the mind.

In this situation, his notoriety at ridicule and satire was noticed by the parents and masters of a club of minor Thespians who used to assemble at the Three Tun Tavern, near Spitalfield's church, and at the Three Morrice Dancers in the Old Change. Here he produced a performance entitled "The Stinging Nettle;" what this piece wanted in manner was made up with asperity; and he often rejoiced that not a copy could be found; however, John Scott, of Amwell, a quaker, and author of a volume of poetry, who read it, said "that it was in Churchill's best manner." This was followed by another, called the "Reward of Merit," the principal part of which is to be found in the London Magazine for July and August 1780.

Soon after he was out of his articles with this baking bookseller he hired himself as a foreigner to teach French in a boarding school at Vauxhall, kept by one Mannypenny and Co. and succeeded so well in this occupation that neither master nor scholars suspected him capable of speaking a word of English; but the constraint was too much for him long to bear, and imparting the secret of his disguise to the maids in the kitchen he received his dismissal, not, however, without the character of having ably done the duties of his station.

An earnest desire after the acquisition of knowledge first led our author to the way of selling books; leisure to read, not to indulge idleness, made him a bookseller. He began early in 1777, at the corner of the passage leading to the church in the Little Minories, a book-stall which had been long before kept by an aged woman named Burgan.

While in this situation he became acquainted with the principal library fags, or labourers of the day, most of whom having survived he bestowed a few last words on them in the way of elegy or panegyric.

In 1780 he began business in Bishopsgate church-yard. The day was spent at his sky-covered shop in philosophical conversations and reciprocal communications with some of the first characters, and the evenings, and even nights, in the orgies of youthful blood; yet amidst all this dissipation he evinced some prudence in his choice of companions, which he always selected from situations better than his own. Saturday nights were particularly devoted to these irregularities, which he jocosely called " borrowing an hour of the Lord ;" and some of these frolics sometimes assumed a very serious aspect. The police of Bishopsgate parish was very weak and ineffectual about 1784, and it so happened one night in August that year that some of these nocturnal disturbers being captured and conveyed to the watch-house, they contrived so to intoxicate this posse of viligant guardians that none were left awake, and only two or three were to be found next morning asleep in the watch-house, which, about seven o'clock, was discovered to be on fire.

His first setting out in business was marked with a great degree of industry, enough to cancel the folly of indolence and indulgence which might have preceded it. He hired himself to a widow in Kingsland-road who kept two baker's shops, and worked there as half-man five years and a half ; that is, he took a share of the night-work, and the Sundays, for his board and lodging.

In 1792 he commenced the Conjuror's Magazine, a monthly publication of which he was projector and editor. This contained a translation of Lavater's work on physiognomy. Of the first numbers of this collection 10,000 were sold each month. During this time he brought out a collection of Apparitional histories, prefaced by an ingenious argument, endeavouring to convince the world of the reality of " the visits from the world of spirits," the title of the book ; but beyond that he did little more than write over again Baxter, Moreton, Glanville, Webster, Dr. Henry More, and repeat his own stories and others from the Arminian Magazine, one of the most emphatical of which is entitled " Death in the Pot." During these avocations, which were all studied in the street and mostly written on loose papers at the public house, he projected and carried on a considerable medical work on the virtues of English plants for the cure of diseases, in the manner of Culpeper, whose astrological remarks he has carefully preserved with those of Blagrave, a supplementary author to the original work. The whole was illustrated with necessary tables, and above 200 engravings. The additional articles, not to be found in the original work, were supplied from Hill's folio Herbal, Short, and Miller on plants. He was also the editor of the Wonderful Magazine. He complained sometimes, and not without reason, of ill usage from his employers. One Locke, a printer of Fetter-lane, who went there by the name of Bentley, and afterwards removed to Red-lion-street, Holborn, failed 129*l*. in his debt, for writing only, and the Attorney for the bankruptcy objected to Lemoine proving the debt at Guildhall, notwithstanding the commissioners were in his favour ; he therefore lost the whole.

Though condemned, by the harshness of his fate, to a daily dependence on his industry about the streets and at sales, to pick up rare and uncommon books, he never so far complied with the wickedness of others as to assist in the publication or sale of improper books or prints.

About this time he published The Kentish Curate, a narrative romance in 4 volumes, exhibiting some of the most depraved characters in life, but as they are properly hung out of view on the gibbet of reproach their examples can do no harm, and, as Dr. Johnson wisely observes, " we sometimes succeed by indiscretion when we fail by better examples," while almost all the absurdity of conduct arises from our imitation of those whom we should not resemble.

He continued his business in Bishopsgate church-yard, without interruption, till 1788, when he was constrained to purchase his freedom, and kept it 7 years longer, in all 14 years. He left it in 1795, when he commenced pedestrian bookseller, after which he was constantly seen in the habit he is depicted in the accompanying plate. In his general appearance he very much resembled a Jew, to which his bag gave a great deal of similitude.

To be a foreigner was always with the vulgar a reason of reproach in England, and to resemble an Israelite with an old clothes-bag is sure to excite some illiberal reflections fom the ignorant in our streets. To such, when they mistook him for a Rosemary-lane dealer, he had some pleasant reply, constantly reminding them that Jesus Christ was a Jew also, that he lived and died as such, and for that reason the persons of that dispersed nation ought to be respected and not reviled. On such occasions he was at times treated with respect by some for recalling this serious truth to their mind.

In 1797, he published a small history of the Art of Printing, in which he displayed considerable knowledge and integrity on the subject. His industry was next directed to the finishing of a Bibliographical Dictionary, afterward published by Dr. Adam Clarke.

From some family misunderstanding he was long separated from his wife; this circumstance imbittered the remainder of his days, and he often deplored the loss of his partner's affections. From this period his spirits became comparatively broken; and he who had been the gayest of the gay was reduced to distress, and procured a scanty subsistence by collecting books for the trade and compiling pamphlets for the publishers. Industry was always a leading feature in his character; and from morning till night did he perambulate the streets of London, with a bag under his arm, satisfied if he gained enough to provide for the day which flew over his head.

He was one of the judges in England of old books, a professor of the French and German languages, an able commentator on the Jewish writings, an amiable and unaffected man, an enlightened companion. He ended his chequered life in St. Bartholomew's Hospital, April 30, 1812, aged 56 years.

(not necessarily bibliographical)

If you refer again to the vastly entertaining letter by Oscar Wilde which I printed in the "Colloquialisms" in Part 2 you will see that Wilde speaks of "the ravings of their mountain home." This puzzled me over and over again, but when you are printing something that a genius has written you take everything without a grain of salt, for you never know what he may say. But, when, too late, I read the letter once more in the finished Part I saw that the word must have been a misprint in the auction-catalogue, and that what Wilde wrote was not "ravings" but "ravines." The latter makes sense of what seemed to be nonsense. Why on earth did I not think of it while the proofs were passing through the press? The matter was but the substitution of a "g" for an "e", but what a difference it makes! And as for the original misprint, I can only say what Leech's chemist's boy said to the policeman after he had hit an old gentleman in the back with a snowball, Please, Sir, it wasn't me!

* * *

I am really in love with misprints—so long as they don't appear in B. A. R.—because probably no one knows better than myself how easy it is for them to happen. You have to have the eye of an eagle to insure that they shall not occur in any work that you are concerned with. But they are funny. Here is one of the latest, from a catalogue:

The Elephant's Bull and Grand Fête Champêtre, 1808

This of course was part of the title of a children's book entitled The Elephant's Ball. Then the printer made truly a "bull" of it. If it were not for these little diversions an editor's life would lack some of its salt.

* * *

One of the problems of the "new" bookseller, who generally finds that there is but little profit in new books (in addition to which there is a tremendous amount of laborious work and detail for precious few pence), is to know how to start a second-hand branch, in which there are infinite possibilities of profit. The difficulty to the "new" bookseller desiring to start such a branch is that he cannot see where his customers are to come from, since the greater part of second-hand bookselling is done by means of catalogues, which can reach the ends of the earth for a single halfpenny. The answer to that is that catalogues of the stock can be sent to all the public libraries of the globe. Many American, Canadian, Australian and other libraries are heavy purchasers from catalogues. A list of public libraries can be got from Clegg's Directory. Then, having acquired enough customers among libraries to pay the cost of printing and postage, there remains the possibility of acquiring local and other customers by means of surplus copies of the catalogues. This is the practical advice of one who "knows the ropes," and no "new" bookseller should lose a moment's time in adding a second-hand branch to his business.

* * *

I always regard it as the highest of compliments when a bookseller-subscriber orders a second copy of B. A. R. to be sent to his private address, in addition to the copy sent to the business. The reason is that in business hours one rarely has uninterrupted leisure to give to B. A. R., and there is much to be learnt from a study of its pages that cannot be acquired by a mere perfunctory reference to the price of any particular book while engaged in business. One or two London booksellers have adopted the plan for years, and now a very prominent country bookseller has followed their example. I will undertake to say that the extra subscription is made many times over in consequence of discoveries of values in books which in business hours they were not searching for. And, after all, there is the second copy to sell some day if done with, and it must bring back some of the subscription. So the bookseller who does this is a "wise virgin."

* * *

The country bookseller in question wrote, a few days after receiving Parts 1-2-3, as follows :—

"I have found it very interesting reading already in the parts that I have, and I feel sure I shall find it both very beneficial as well as enjoyable."

* * *

Meâ culpâ ! This, I believe, (for I am no Latinist), is the correct way of beginning a confession, and confession, it is said, is good for the soul. Let me then own up to the fact that in Part 3 I made what by some is called a " bloomer." For I wrote, " no one ever says an before a vowel," which of course is absurd. The line could only have been written in a moment of temporary aberration, induced probably by an extra acute attack of indigestion with which I remember being troubled at the time, and probably due either to war-bread or to air raids. Therefore I ask for absolution.

* * *

Sometimes an author's name will appear in B. A. R. in two languages. The following instance occurs in the present volume, as will be seen by the Index. Ridley's Latin work, De Coena Dominica, etc., appears under the Latin name Ridleius, as on the title, while his Friendly Farewel, being in English, appears under Ridley. The reason is that the inexperienced enquirer, a recent recruit to bookselling perhaps, would be sure to search the Index for the name as printed on the title of the book. I mention this for guidance, and also so that it may be known that the cases are not the result of oversight, (as might be supposed), but are part of the system of compiling B. A. R.

* * *

Re the last paragraph in Colloquialisms in Part 4 of volume 13 of B. A. R., viz. the " Cordon bleu " faux pas. The editor of one of our trade journals wrote to me that it was " more than good enough for Punch," and asked why I did not send it to that revered joker. I'm sure I don't know, unless it was because I should then have had to quote it as being from Punch, and then where would the credit have been for B. A. R. for having printed something good ? For of course the greatest joke of all was that it was not a joke, but was seriously meant by the man who sent the advertisement. He really thought there was a "Mr. Cordon Bleu ".

* * *

Among the tribulations of editors is the following specimen. A new subscriber did not pay for Parts 1-2 of this year's B. A. R. When Part 3 was ready I wrote a perfectly correct business intimation that unless he sent a cheque or 17/3 for the two parts and Part 3 as well he would not receive the latter. Thereupon he sent a cheque with the following note :— " Cheque enclosed in reply to this damned sauce." I was upon the point of returning his cheque and telling him that I declined his subscription, and his " damned sauce," but thought I would give him another chance, so sent Part 3.

* * *

A subscriber near London, trying to cut down expenses in consequence of war conditions, ordered B. A. R. to be discontinued, but was induced to reverse his decision. On Sept. 15, 1917 I received the following pleasant communication from him :—

" I enclose cheque for B. A. R. I have found it very useful lately, and am glad I took your advice and continued my subscription."

All I can say is that if a bookseller cannot make more than the cost of the subscription—even if it were three times its present rate—he had better retire from business, or, alternatively, go to " a better 'ole," say the workhouse by preference, because there you get board and lodging free.

* * *

Will some youngster in cataloguing kindly explain to an oldster what is meant by the term " levant gilt " in the description of a binding ? " Levant morocco " one knows as a correct term, but how " morocco " can be transposed into " gilt " passes comprehension. Will some brilliant young modernist explain what is meant ?

The following obituary notice appeared in The Times, January 16, 1917, and would have been noticed before but for lack of space in B. A. R.

> The death took place in Chelsea on Saturday of Mr. Henry Combe Nattali. Mr. Nattali, who would be more correctly described as a gentleman who dealt in books rather than as a bookseller, belonged to a family which still exists near Milan, and of which a member settled in England in the latter part of the 18th century. His father, Michael Angelo Nattali, entered the publishing house of Longman's and started on his own account in or before the year 1824, as a publisher and bookseller, first in Tavistock-street and afterwards in Bedford-street, Covent-garden. He built up an excellent business in a few years, but died in the prime of life on August 19, 1848. Mr. H. C. Nattali, the second of his four sons, of whom Benjamin, the eldest, became librarian at Windsor, received his second Christian name to commemorate his uncle, William Combe (1741-1823) the author of " Dr. Syntax " and many other books, and a friend of Mr. John Walter, of The Times, to which he was a contributor from 1802-9. At his father's death the cares of the business fell on the shoulders of young Henry Nattali, then a youth of 16 or 17 ; he was joined by his father's manager, and for some years the firm was known as Nattali and Bond. From W. Cave's sale on June 28, 1854, to July 8, 1903, Mr. Nattali prepared all or nearly all the catalogues of book and manuscript sales held at Christie's and this work was carried on concurrently with his own business. On leaving Bedford-street for smaller quarters at 39, Duke-street, St. James's, Mr. Nattali confined his attention more particularly to fine books on sporting and art subjects, and made a speciality of sporting prints of the time of Alken, Pollard, and others of the early 19th century. He was the last of the old school of booksellers, never too busy for a gossip on rare books and bookmen of the past times.

An excellent notice of a man who had " gentleman " stamped all over him. The only exception one can take to it is the line which suggests that a bookseller can hardly be reckoned to be a gentleman. The writer of the notice must have forgotten such examples to the contrary as David White, F. S. Ellis, scholar and literary man, and Mr. Bond himself, mentioned in the notice, and quite an " old English gentleman," refined, modest, courteous to all, and everything that a gentleman should be. The fact is that bookselling brings its devotees into contact with such exceptionally fine characters that it would be strange if, whatever their origin, they did not unconsciously acquire some of the characteristics of their patrons. I am thinking at the present moment especially of such collectors as Sir Dudley Marjoribanks, in the " seventies " (afterwards first Lord Tweedmouth), and Mr Drummond, of the same period, the late Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, and many another. In those days I was a young bookseller, less than 30 years of age, and Mr. Drummond was one of the wealthiest bankers in the country, and whenever he called to see what new purchases I had he invariably removed his hat immediately upon entering, and did not replace it till leaving, because I was uncovered. It is in just those little things that the man of no breeding betrays his lack of it.

In The National Review, April, 1916, an article by Mr. W. Roberts dealt with the exportation of pictures and rare books, suggesting that some day such exportation might be prohibited from this country. Such prohibition might be proper in the case of pictures because artists do not as a rule duplicate their works, but it would not apply to books for the reason that numbers of copies of each publication are printed. In addition to this, books can be reproduced indefinitely, and so not be lost to the country of origin. So there seems little fear of booksellers being compelled to sell only in Great Britain. Finally, Mr. Roberts points out that the sale of collections of pictures and books provides that hard cash which will be so great a desideratum for many years as an aid to paying the accretion to the national debt created by the war.

* * *

A worthy subscriber sent me the other day a lengthy set of lines which he termed a "poem," and which I had permission to print. I returned them with thanks but give three of the verses below to show you what an editor has to put up with sometimes:

What thinks for you each day and night;
What gives you leading, points and light,
And gives poor what's-his-name a fright?
Your B. A. R.

What is it shows up swindlers' tricks
And takes the chance of blows from bricks;
What gives you pence and takes the kicks?
Your B. A. R.

What acts as dry-nurse to you all,
Is ever at your beck and call,
And soothes you when you have a fall?
Your B. A. R.

And he really expected that I should print the whole of it!

* In consequence of the irregularity of the mails from the United States it is impossible to guarantee an early issue of the records of the American sales. Several catalogues belonging to the past quarter have arrived since this Part was sent to press, and the records will be included in Part 3. An easy way of calculating the English equivalent is to cut off the last numeral of the dollar and to double the first. Thus $50 becomes £10; $500 becomes £100, and so on.

Key to Sales—Vol. 14 Part 4

(It is not every new subscriber who will understand the importance of the records of American sales which now appear in B. A. R. It lies in the fact that America is the largest market for scarce books outside our own country, and that it is desirable to know what prices are being obtained in the States for such books as we export there. Much appreciation of these records has been shewn by those who realize their value)

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

These records are necessarily exact reproductions (abbreviated) of the catalogue-descriptions, and the editor disclaims responsibility for grammatical or other errors which may appear therein, unless such errors are obviously typographical misprints in the originals. Where no sizes are given the books are 8vo. et infra. Where no binding is stated it is understood to be the original cloth or paper covers, as published. The following is a key to the abbreviations :—

a. u. n.	=	absque ulla nota	ills.	=	illustrations
advts.	=	advertisements	1st	=	first
Anr. Edn.		Another edition	l. g.	=	gothic letter
bnd.	=	bound	L. P.	=	Large Paper
b. l.	=	Black Letter	lib.	=	library
ca.	=	circa (about)	m.	=	marbled
cf.	=	calf	mor.	=	morocco
cold.	=	coloured	N. Y.	=	New York
cont.	=	contemporary	ob.	=	oblong
dup.	=	duplicate	orig.	=	original
e.	=	edges	P. P.	=	Privately Printed
ed.	=	edited	plts.	=	plates
Edinb.	=	Edinburgh	port.	=	portrait
edn.	=	edition	Pres. copy	=	Presentation copy
engs.	=	engravings	s.	=	sprinkled
ex.	=	extra	s. d.	=	sans date
fo.	=	folio	ser.	=	series
front.	=	frontispiece	t. e. g.	=	top edges gilt
g.	=	gilt	trans.	=	translated
g. l.	=	Gothic Letter	vol.	=	volume
g. t.	=	gilt tops (same as top edges gilt)	v. y.	=	various years
			vell.	=	vellum
hf.	=	half	w. a. f.	=	with all faults

When, for example, a binding is stated to be mor. ex., t. e. g., the term t. e. g.—i. e. top edges gilt—implies that the other edges are uncut. When the other edges are cut the fact is stated. In some exceptional cases—such, for instance, as a first edition of 'Waverley' or a Keats' 'Endymion'—when the condition of "original boards, uncut" exists, and accounts for an abnormal price, the description is given without abbreviation. In some instances autographs are stated in the sale-catalogues to be on the titles or elsewhere in the books. When such autographs are not mentioned in B.A.R. it is only because they are of no known persons, and have no bearing whatever on the prices realized. Titles are abbreviated in the case of books in Lowndes and Brunet, and when known to be not in those works the titles are given as fully as may be necessary. The names of the auctioneers, with the date of sale and the number of the lot, are given within brackets, immediately before the price, thus :—(S. Dec. 16 ; 516). This would represent Sotheby's, December 16, 1916 ; lot 516, while any month from January to August refers to the year 1917. The auctioneers represented are :

A. — Adam & Sons, Dublin
B. — Bennett, Dublin
C. — Christie, Manson & Woods
D. — Dowell, Edinburgh
E. — Edmiston, Glasgow
H. — Hodgson & Co.
M. — Morrison, Dick & McChlery, Glasgow
P. — Puttick & Simpson
S. — Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge
St. — Stevens

For American auctioneers see the Keys to Sales. Magazines are sold "with all faults." Lots containing two or more works are not recorded except in very rare instances, when the value of one work overshadows the others, and the lot is bought for it alone. Composite lots mostly afford no criterion whatever of values. Where no initials are given it is because they do not appear in the sale-catalogues and are unknown to the editor. The names of binders, when of importance, are in B.A.R. When not stated, although printed in the sale-catalogues, the reason is obvious. When the names of buyers are not given it is solely because, in those cases, they are not obtainable from the auctioneers. The spelling in B.A.R. is always that of the original titles, and apparent errors are not misprints. The same applies to some accents in foreign languages of which the type does not invariably permit, and also to old and erroneous punctuation.

* "A hitherto unknown book, attributing the authorship of the Shakespeare Plays to Bacon. One of the most remarkable statements is a reference to the manuscript of Bacon's 'Common-place Book' (now in the British Museum). It is only since about 1883 that this Common-place Book has been brought into prominence in the discussion."
The following manuscript note regarding the authorship of this work appears on back of title-page of the Bodleian Library copy. "This work was written by Herbert Lawrence, Esq., of York Buildings, and afterward of Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, surgeon and apothecary. He was a school-fellow, I believe, but certainly an intimate friend, of Garrick, and very much acquainted with, and patronized by, Lord Sandwich, then First Lord of the Admiralty. When I knew him he was very little engaged in business, but lived in the first society. He visited my uncle daily, talking of current topics—literature, the theatre, and politics . . . He died about 1796. He published, besides this feeble work, a novel called The Contemplative Man, or Christopher Crab, and some fables in verse The Passions Personified. J. A., Nov. 17th, 1823."

The two leaves are printed as a separate preliminary quire, and it appears almost certain from the examination of a considerable number of copies that it was printed later than the book, and inserted only in some examples.

* This copy has since been acquired by Mr. Louis Duveen, and by him presented to the Bodleian Library, Oxford, his action being the result of a suggestion by Mr. F. S. Boas. Mr. Boas has since made the following statement:—"The name of Sir Thomas Hanmer may be associated with the volume, in so far as the MS. notes and corrections are taken from his Oxford edition of 1744. But from indications that I have found in the notes themselves, and from an examination by British Museum experts, it is evident that the handwriting is not that of Hanmer himself. Nevertheless, the annotations are a proof of the influence of his edition, which Collins, then an undergraduate at Magdalen, welcomed in well-known lines. The Folio has a very rare imprint, and is a valuable addition to the treasures of the Bodleian."

* Described in the catalogue as being the " first edition," but see B. A. R., vol. 12, page 250, where a copy dated 1780 is recorded as having been sold, at the same sale-room, for £1, and a note stated that it was " probably the first printed edition, despite that claim being made for the undated edition printed at Dublin for J. Ewling." To add to the confusion Lowndes gives " Dublin, 1785 " as the first edition. The edition which has brought the most money is that of " Dublin, for J. Ewling, (1781)" which has sold for an average of £30. It seems, in fact, that no one knows what really was the date of the first edition. Ed.

* Consisting of " Jeames's Diary," pp. 48 ; " The Irish Improvisatrice," pp. 100 ; " The Deaf Spy " (a tale of Old Mexico, Texas and California), pp. 96. The title-pages of the latter tales are removed, by which operation they are incorporated as part of " Thackeray's Best Novel," representing the quantity, 196 pages, Thackeray's 48 pages serving as apology for the title. Of Taylor & Co.'s edition of " Jeames's Diary," N. Y. 1846 (containing only the portion published in Punch previous to 1846), only one example—the Major Lambert copy, rebound and wanting the original wrapper— is known to exist. The present copy is one of the 1846 edition, disguised by its publisher. Under the front cover a fragment of the wrapper of 1846 remains attached to the half-title ; of the original title-page, removed because of the date (which would conflict with the publishers' mention of " Thackeray's Best Novel "), a portion of the inner margin survives.

* These two copies differ in the preliminary leaves. The first has engraved title, followed by two leaves, "Dedicatoria," which end on the fourth page with the subscription, "Don F. Honorius Philonus [sic] Monachus S. Benedicti." The second has the same engraved title, but at p. 4 of the dedication the name in the subscription is correctly spelled "Philoponus," and beneath this begins an epistle "Ad lectorem," which ends on the following leaf. Then two leaves, "Observatio de magnete navtico," followed by a plate of an owl standing on a cushion. The plates follow as in the other edition. In both these issues there is no word "Finis" on p. 101, but there is additional matter, entitled "Vaticinivm de Messia et Evangelii ipsius predicatoribus," which extends to the foot of the next page. Then follows an unnumbered leaf, headed "Ordinis S. P. Benedicti," and at the bottom of the page is a list of plates. On the verso of this leaf is a very long list of errata, the same in both copies.
